High heath, water channel, moors, views, sandy wilderness

In Brief

This is a remarkable walk which includes some wild features not normally seen on a country walk: a long level woodland section along a water channel and vast sandy spaces like inland "beaches". This is MoD land but it is not part of a danger area and there is free access. You may see soldiers and their vehicles on exercise but you will also meet families, children and dogs aplenty. For refreshment, there is an excellent pub near the start/end of the walk.

!! Before doing this walk, you should ring 01483-798357 Defence Training Estate, Training Area Officer to check that the Bourley Road gates are open. During summer/autumn 2018 this was only "some weekends". Hopefully, when the current regular exercises are finished, this situation will improve. See the note in Leg 2 about the new fences being erected around the area.

Any kind of attire is fine but boots are recommended because of the terrain. Except near the main roads, your dog can run quite free. There are no stiles.

The walk begins at the Rowhill Nature Reserve car park on the outskirts of Aldershot, postcode GU11 3BD. There is also the improvised Bourley Road car park but it is not recommended as it is often congested. For more details, see at the end of this text (→ Getting There).

The Walk

Leg 1: Caesar's Camp and the Levada 5 km=3 miles

Rowhill Nature Reserve covers 22 ha and was once a private timber and brick-works, as you may see. It was made a local nature reserve in 1985 and, thanks to local volunteers, is returning to its original state with deciduous woodland, working coppice and, in the spring, bluebells. The "Royal Arms" pub is on the other side of the Reserve and is a useful watering hole for the end of the walk (see foot of this text).

- 1 Exit the car park to the road and turn left to a roundabout. Cross the main road, turn right on it for only 10m and turn left past an MoD sign on a foot-path. Go through a large kissing-gate past a sign for Caesar's Camp. In 30m, the path veers right away from the fence, ascends and reaches a wooded crossing path in a slight dip. Cross this path, a fraction right, to a rising path opposite that runs between banks. In fact, any path will do. The idea is to come out into the open moor. At the top, turn left on a wide path with a silver birch wood on your left and extensive open views of the moors on your right.
- 2 You will be following this main track for 1½ km, the first ½ km next to the wood, the rest out in the open. Very soon, your track bends right and left but you have the option of continuing straight ahead through trees on a path that soon veers right to meet the main track again. 100m later, you see a pond on your right and the path forks. Here, you have a choice of either of two level paths as they join up again. The left-hand path is easier but the right-hand path takes you a little closer to the pond for a photo opportunity. At a junction of paths, keep straight ahead on the same wide level sandy path, avoiding all rising paths, left or right, stepping for a while into Surrey. Your path runs through an area of scattered birches with low hills on each side. You cross another track as the path begins to rise gently in an area known as Long Bottom. Finally you come to a T-junction with, on the left, a small metal gate and houses visible in the distance.

- 3 Turn right at the T-junction, still on a wide path. In nearly 100m, keep left at a junction, then keep left again in 70m by a Danger Drop sign. On your right is a steep drop. You are in part of Caesar's Camp, a hill fort with great views all around. In 100m, your path comes to a wide crossing track with views ahead. Turn right on the track and keep left, avoiding a track that forks off right. In 60m, turn left at a T-junction on a hard-surfaced track.
- 4 Continue along this wide track, going past a conifer plantation on your right, with gorse and wild heathland. 400m after joining this track, you see on your right a metal gate and an animal grid. Turn right here, going through a small metal gate onto a wide track going downhill into a birch wood, back into Hampshire. Continue on this path for about 300m, where you come to the nearest corner of a green metal fence on your right followed immediately by a bridge. Directly after the bridge, turn left on a very narrow rooty level path that runs beside an old water channel on your left. You have reached the start of the secret "levada".
- 5 The next km or so is the closest you'll get in SE England to those famous levadas of Madeira that channel water from high in the mountains to the populous areas, with level paths running beside them that are such a pleasure to walk. The path soon gets wider and easier and bends sharp right, winding right around a valley. Always keep to the level path, avoiding any ascending or descending paths where various rivulets descend to join or cross the channel, sometimes with small bridges. The path crosses a wide track diagonally and takes you through a dusky area of tall pines. The pines change to birches with a more open area on your right. The path crosses a wide stony track near a stone bridge and bears right to run high above the track. You meet more scots pines and, looking to down on your right, you see the track now deep in the valley. 230m after crossing the track, your path crosses a very steep stony path. Just 15m after this, your path forks. Here, leave the level path, which continues onwards for some distance, by taking the right fork downhill. This narrow path descends gently for some 150m. When you reach the bottom, turn left on a wide semi-tarmac track.
- 6 In 100m, at a T-junction with a steep slope ahead, turn right on another wide track. You pass a large pond on your right, unromantically called Reservoir No. 1. As you near a grassy meadow visible ahead, cross a track and go through a small metal gate next to an animal grid. In 20m, veer right to the edge of the grass and walk the whole length of the meadow, either using the track round the right perimeter or diagonally across it, aiming for a metal barrier. Go through a small metal gate, cross the busy Bourley Road, a fraction to the right, and enter a large park space used for military vehicles (but open to walkers).

Leg 2: The High Road 1½ km=1 mile

A note about fences. The MoD is enclosing the Aldershot open spaces with a metal fence to keep out vehicular intruders. However, they intend to provide pedestrian and equestrian gates at specific points. (See the Normandy walk where the area was fenced with excellent access gates.) Since the fencing takes the highest priority, the “gate” may be an afterthought. The layout changes from week to week and you may find you need to slip past a barrier or through a gap. This is the situation at the end of this leg where a new barrier has been erected, with access at the side for walkers. The improvised Bourley Road car park could possibly be moved or removed with access to the road at another point. Please keep us informed using the Feedback email address.

This is an easy-to-follow stretch where in principle you stay constantly on the main curvy path. It ends, once again, at the Bourley Road after giving you great views along the way.

Go to the back of the military vehicle park, furthest from the road, where you will find a wide shingle path. Continue ahead on this path as it zigzags uphill over a grassy area and goes through a band of trees into gorse. Here, avoid a minor track on the right. At the top, go straight over a track. Your path goes down a shallow dip, where a track joins from the left, then up again. Ahead you can see Farnborough Airport and you may see planes taking off, especially if an air show is in progress. (See the sister walk “Aldershot and the Basingstoke Canal”.) The spire of the Royal Garrison Church in Aldershot can also be seen. Avoid a track here forking right. You soon pass another junction and a pine wood on your left. The track runs level and later descends. Stay on the main track for a good 400m, ignoring all paths off until you reach a major 3-way junction. Turn right here on a wide track, soon to reach a metal barrier. Go past the barrier (or pan left and right for a new walker's access – see note above). Cross the road to the small improvised Bourley Road car park. (See note above.)

Leg 3: Sandhills and Copse 1½ km=1 mile

This is a very complex section and you need to concentrate more than usual to arrive successfully at the end point.

- 1 Make sure you take the first track on your left. Be careful to avoid the second track to your right which is the entrance to a small car park. Go through a 1-bar metal gate beside an MoD yellow warning notice and a modern swing-gate beside an animal grid. The path goes past a large brick shed. Immediately after the shed, turn left uphill on a wide hard-surfaced path. Stay on this path, avoiding, in 150m, a wide track on the right with views of Bourley Hill. 100m further, at the top of a rise, ignore a path on the left and, in 20m at a T-junction, turn right on a track. In only 30m, before the track begins to ascend and opposite another path on the right, turn left on a very narrow path between some small oaks. In 100m, the path crosses a rutted track. It then crosses a ditch and, 50m later, it finally joins a wide path coming from the right.

- 2 In 40m, your path reaches a junction with a wide hard-surfaced track with a series of steep banks ahead. Turn left on the track for only 20m, then sharp right, keeping to the left of an oak tree, and go up a short but fairly steep slope ahead. (There are even steeper slopes to its right, which are best avoided.) At the top of the slope, turn right on the main path which is joined after 70m by a crossing path. Ignore this path and continue ahead for another 40m until you reach a clear fork. Take the left option. At the top of a slope, you come to a junction with a line of bricks across your path. Turn sharp left on a wide track and, in 20m, opposite a large concrete structure, turn sharp right on a path downhill. If you began the walk at the Rowhill Nature Reserve, you will recognise this path from the outward journey. In 60m, branch left steeply downhill through hollies. On reaching a fence, veer left to a noticeboard and swing-gate, the main road and the Rowhill Nature Reserve where the walk began.

For refreshments, the Royal Arms pub/restaurant is only a short distance away through the Nature Reserve, in Surrey. With your back to the road go to the left-hand side of the car park (near a house) and take a wide ascending path to the right of the Field Centre. At a tall oak, keep right and keep ever onwards, gently uphill. Follow the path through the hollies until you reach a lane, Rowhills. Turn right on the lane and left on the main road quickly reaching the pub. The Royal Arms is open all day at weekends and has a pleasant patio.

Getting there

By car: If coming from the north on the A3, take the A31 (Hog's Back), ignore the first left filter for Aldershot and continue to the large roundabout just east of Farnham. Follow signs for Odiham, Badshot Lea, Farnborough. Follow the A325, straight on at each roundabout or junction, until after 1½ miles you pass the Royal Arms. Continue to the next small roundabout. Turn right on Cranmore Lane: the car park for the Rowhill Nature Reserve is on the right.

If coming from the M3, come off at exit 4, take the A325, always following signs for Farnborough, through the town and past the airport on your right. 2 miles after the airport, continue ahead over a large roundabout. Look for a 30 mph sign ½ mile later and a brown tourist sign for Rowhill Nature Reserve and turn sharp left at the next small roundabout.

By bus/train: there is a bus stop on Cranmore Lane opposite the Nature Reserve; various buses run from Aldershot station to here.
