

Medway Ramble

West Peckham, Twyford Bridge, Hadlow

Distance: 22 km=13½ miles

easy-to-moderate walking

Region: Kent

Date written: 17-sep-2012

Author: Malinovka

Last update: 15-jun-2017

Refreshments: West Peckham, Twyford Bridge, Golden Green, Hadlow

Map: Explorer 136 (The Weald) and 148 (Maidstone)

but the maps in this guide should be sufficient

Problems, changes? We depend on your feedback: feedback@fancyfreewalks.org

Public rights are restricted to printing, copying or distributing this document exactly as seen here, complete and without any cutting or editing. See Principles on main webpage.

Villages, woodland, variety, surprises, churches, meadows, river

In Brief

If there's one word to describe this amazing circular walk it's: variety! with something new round each corner. The walk starts quietly with gentle meadows, a lost church, woods, streams and gardens. It follows long-forgotten paths and suddenly bursts into a tumult of life when you reach the Bridge at Yalding. From there you have a more settled river walk before you leave it for more meadows, a town and castle, and return to the start for a drink at the iconic Swan on the Green with its home-brewed beers.

There are some patches of nettles on this walk so shorts are not advisable. Because of the length, you really need to wear boots. This walk is not suitable for a large dog because of some awkward stiles.

The walk begins in West Peckham, Kent, postcode ME18 5JW. You can also start at Yalding Station. For more details, see at the end of this text (→ Getting There).

The Walk

Leg 1: West Peckham to East Peckham Church 2½ km=1½ miles

West Peckham was also called “Little Peckham”, being the much prettier kid brother to East Peckham. The medieval manuscript known as the Textus Roffensis in Rochester Cathedral calls it “Pecham”. “Peck” is simply “peak”, i.e. a homestead at the top of a hill. Before the Conquest, the parish belonged to Leofwine, brother of King Harold, also killed in 1066. It then passed to Odo, bishop of Bayeux, half-brother of William the Conqueror (well, all his brothers were half, of course). Obviously a prize gift for regal brothers. The Norman-Saxon church of St Dunstan is worth a visit.

- 1 Follow the lane, Church Road, away from the church. You may pass the Linton's seafood van, with the sign “turbot charged” (geddit?) and a number plate that could be read as “(h)ell, I (h)ate cod”. Go between some white “gates” that proclaim West Peckham and continue ahead on a major road, Mereworth Road. Note that you are on two long-distance footpaths: the Greensand Way (GW) running from Haslemere to near the Saxon Shore and the Wealdway running from Gravesend to the south coast. After more than 200m on this road, immediately after the entrance to Dukes Place with its clipped hedge, turn right on a concrete drive marked as a byway. The drive passes close to this grand timbered house where the occasional glimpse of it over the hedge afford a wonderful impression.

Dukes Place is a Grade I mansion from the early 1400s, built as a community of Knight's Hospitallers, founded by John Culpepper of that enduring Kent family (see the “Offham” walk in this series). But its history was not always so exalted. During the 1700s the house was converted into seven labourer's cottages and after the last war it was semi-derelict. The building is L-shaped with two floors, timber-framed with plaster infilling and the hipped roof is plain tiled.

- 2 Where the drive bends right, leave it by keeping straight ahead on a grassy path, keeping right where the path takes its sunken course. This attractive path runs between fields within a band of trees, then down into denser woodland and crosses a stream by a ford 2017: [clambering over a fallen tree] via some natural stepping stones. Your path bends left through more woodland and comes up to a cluster of houses which includes Beadles Forge with its collection of old wringers and vices. You reach the main A26 road by the three oasts of Forge Farm. Turn right and, in just 30m, cross the road carefully and turn left on a tarmac track.

- 3 The track quickly degrades to dirt and takes you by an unneeded stile to another road, the A228, Seven Mile Lane. Cross this road carefully and take a tarmac lane directly opposite. Ignore a footpath on the left and finally, at a road junction, go straight ahead up steps and over a stile into the churchyard of St Michael, East Peckham. You will be immediately struck by the extensive views to the south, best viewed from a bench seat just outside the lichgate. Now you will be drawn to the church itself which has an entrance a little further along on the south side.

The austere unused empty space and isolation of East Peckham church are an empty echo of times past when it was a centre of life for a large village and rural community whose history is written in the parish records over every century. The earliest parts are from the mid-1100s. Massive changes occurred in 1547 following the Act of Uniformity when mass had to be said in English (as opposed to Latin) and so many decorations and religious images had to be taken down and buried and wall paintings were whitewashed. Just six years later the orders were reversed under Mary Tudor before being reinstated with a vengeance under the Puritans. The churchyard which records so many lives and deaths is often described as a "library" (from the many inscriptions) and a "gallery" (from the headstones). Bodies were wrapped in linen until 1666 when Charles II decreed woollen shrouds to stimulate the wool trade. There are six bells and the church's bellringers were renowned: in 1932 they rang all six bells 5040 times in a different order without stopping. For a wealth of information, the book "For All the Saints" by Margaret Lawrence is available (price £15, ring:01622 871945).

Leg 2: East Peckham Church to Nettlestead Green 3 km=2 miles

- 1 From the side entrance to the church, continue through the churchyard, down to the far right corner. Here, take a narrow path through bushes and then diagonally across a field. Turn right along the edge of the field, from where it is worth turning round for a final look at the church. Go over a stile in the left-hand corner, and through a modern kissing-gate by a wooden fence. Your path zigzags left-right by a sheep pasture and suddenly comes out into a sloping lawn, a wonderful surprise. The grass belongs to Dower House, a 1690-vintage Grade II house, and the landscaping has a chestnut avenue, birches and elegant conifers. Keep straight ahead to another modern kissing-gate and a lane. Turn right on the lane, passing on your left Roydon Hall, another fine Grade II house, currently under restoration.

- 2 Just before the entrance to Dower House, turn left on a signposted footpath which is easy to miss. This path goes under tall poplars and through a line of horsechestnuts. Keep ahead, joining a dirt drive coming from the right. Shortly after, at a fork, keep left. At the next junction of tracks, where the main track bends left, keep straight ahead on a grassy path. You pass an unneeded stile and are now on a wide path through Moat Wood. The path runs by a fence through some fine mixed woods. After some distance, turn right with the fence at a corner, following the GW sign. After more woodland, you reach a large field.

- 3 Go straight across the centre of the field, a fraction to the left, through a neck of woodland and along the left-hand side of the next field. You can now see Nettlestead Green ahead and, beyond it, the large village of Yalding with its distinctive church and group of oasts, which is definitely worth a separate visit. At the next corner, keep your direction straight ahead across the centre of the field, passing many geese and an apiary, followed by a hoppable stile. A narrow path takes you beside a house and out to a road in Nettlestead Green. Turn right on the road, quickly reaching the Hop Pole pub. This is a no-swank friendly 17th-century pub that serves the local community and serves an excellent range of ales, starters and main courses.

Leg 3: Nettlestead Green to Twyford Bridge 2 km=1½ miles

- 1 Take the lane opposite the Hop Pole, signposted Yalding, Horsmonden. In 200m, at a bend, go right between barriers onto a footpath passing a group of immaculate once-mobile houses. On reaching a lane, cross straight over through the gates of Cronks Farm. You pass some oasts and reach a converted barn. Note the clock and bell on the front of the barn. Immediately opposite the barn, veer right across the grass to a fingerpost almost hidden in a tall cypress hedge. Go over a stile and straight ahead on a narrow garden path with a pond on your left. The footpath bends left and right and takes you through a small metal gate.

- 2 You are on a narrow path with low-hanging hawthorn trees, often shared with sheep. (Yes, this really is a footpath, even though a bit disused, and you need to persist.) When you reach a T-junction of paths, ignore a small metal gate on your right and turn sharp left in the sheep field. Some of the following fields are scattered with building waste, so keep close to the right-hand side of the all the fields. You pass through the first fence via a low small metal gate. This is followed by a similar gate at the next boundary fence. In this case the gate has to be lifted out of the way and replaced in a leaning position once you have passed through the gap. [\[June 2017: a walker reports gate now barred and difficult to climb over, plus some hassle from occupant, reported and hopefully cleared.\]](#) Keep to the right, passing by the remains of a stile into a small horse pasture, still hugging the right-hand side. Your path is rather overgrown at this point. A stile takes you into another wild meadow, as always, staying on the right.

- 3 You reach the railway at a T-junction. Turn right alongside the railway, going over a wide wooden bridge. Your path goes left and right, and left over a stile. Cross the railway line carefully and go over another robust stile into woodland. A path joins you from the right. That path is part of a circular walk which you can certainly try. You are in a nature reserve that was maintained by Imperial Chemical Industries (ICI) when they operated the adjoining works. The reserve and its pond have fallen into neglect since those days but it still retains a faded charm. This path takes you through pleasant mixed cultivated woodland and round the left of a pond with an observation platform and tables.

- 4 Avoid a path on the left by a table and keep going round the pond until you see some steps and a stile on the left. After negotiating them, you find yourself in an orchard which also serves as a forage for a flock of black Hebridean lambs. The orchard was also once owned and run by ICI. Keep ahead to go over a stile near a house. Avoid a metal gate and tarmac drive and veer left on a narrow path the other side of a fence. Shortly go over a stile to join the drive. Keep left on a tarmac lane which quickly takes you to the Hampstead Road canal of the River Medway just by the Twyford Bridge, probably thronged by eager families, a sudden change from the solitude of the woods and fields. The Anchor pub/restaurant [early 2017: closed for “refurbishment”] is immediately on your right. The “Anchor” is in a perfect spot by a curve of the Medway and ideal for al fresco eating and drinking while you watch families, boats and wildlife, including a bevy of friendly motorbikers. The Anchor also serves ices, tea/coffee and snacks and is open all day.

Leg 4: Twyford Bridge to East Lock 6½ km=4 miles

- 1 Cross the canal, either by the lift bridge or by the raised footbridge by the pub, and turn right on the tarmac pathway that takes you across the sluices over the River Medway. On your left is the medieval Twyford Bridge, with its four pointed arches, dating at least from 1325. Turn right beside the Medway. On your left is Teapot Island, both a café and a museum boasting 6500 teapots on show. It serves ices and of course teas. The towpath takes you over a bridge across an inlet. Across the river is a beautiful group of oast houses. Now you are in open country and the route is easy. You will be following the Medway path as far as East Lock, so precise directions are not needed, except to point out the many things you see along the way.
- 2 The river banks soon become heavily wooded and will remain so for most of the way. This is the most peaceful part of the Medway, generally known as Mouse Bay. After one stout bridge and more woodland you pass an old bridge and a lock, Stoneham Lock. There are willows along the bank, with tall ivy-clad ash trees. After a railway bridge, you are soon out of the wood; you pass over a small bridge and under an old sand conveyor. The path runs under the A228 road bridge, past some industrial buildings, and reaches a road on the outskirts of East Peckham. Cross straight over the road to a path opposite by a metal fence. After this brief interlude, you enjoy once again the peaceful tranquillity of the river and the wilds of nature and woodland.

- 3 The next interesting feature is the Sluice Weir. You can access it via a bridge on the right but you will need to retrace your steps to continue the walk. Like most of the weirs on this river, it has a heavy tidal barrier as well as a sluice and lock. On a sunny weekend you will see kayakers navigating the narrow sluice on the south side. This requires some skill and results in an exhilarating descent into the turbid waters below the weir, deft handling of the paddle being needed to avoid crashing into the overhanging foliage. In a short distance, leave the main path by going right over a long wooden bridge close to that narrow sluice. The river is now more open, with trees on your side only. There is an open meadow on your left before the path returns to the river bank through more trees. You go over a long wooden bridge across a side stream of the river, pass (without crossing it) a tubular metal bridge, offering a photo opportunity, and cross another long wooden bridge over the side stream. You are back in the meadow on a narrow winding path beside the river. The next large expanse of grass plays host annually to a War and Peace show and other attractions. Beyond it, is the Hop Farm Country Park with a vast collection of oast houses.
- 4 At a 4-way fingerpost, veer right, staying close to the river. You come out into the open again and reach a junction with a bridge on your right. Do not take the narrow path straight ahead but turn left on a wide path. You now regain the river side and a narrow path on the right leads you back to the tow path and shortly another lock, Oak Weir which is worth a look with its sluice and tidal barrier. Continue ahead on a narrow pleasant and easy section, through a modern kissing-gate and along an open meadow. Next are another modern kissing-gate, a steel bridge and a 4-way fingerpost. Keep straight ahead through another kissing-gate. You have joined the Wealdway, a long-distance path running from the Thames to the Sussex coast. Finally you reach East Lock. Go right over the river, thus leaving the Wealdway. Go over the sluice and another bridge.

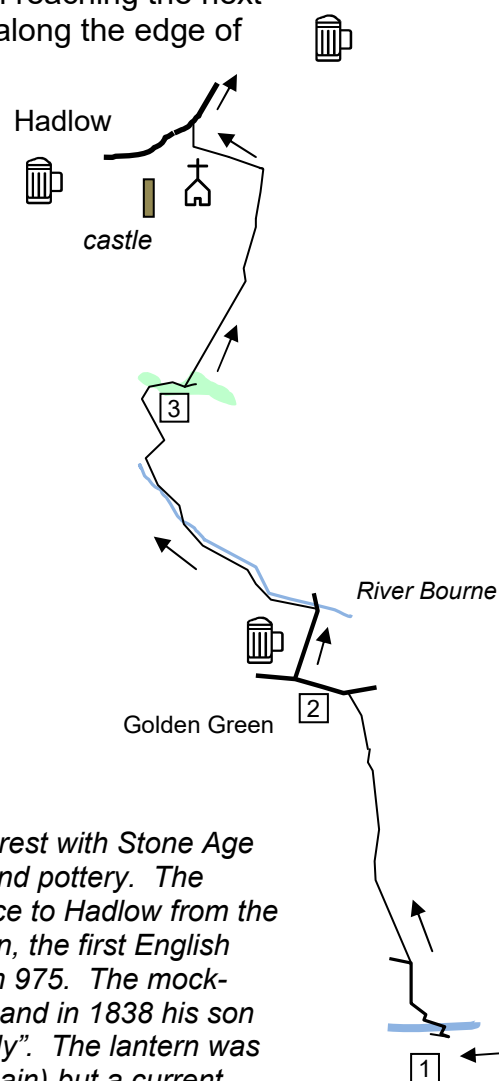

Leg 5: East Lock to Hadlow 3½ km=2 miles

- 1 See mini-map overleaf. Leave the lock, zigzagging left-right on a dirt track. Where the track curves left, keep straight ahead on a path across a field. Your path goes through a gap in the hedge and to the right of a line of poplars, along the left-hand side of a field. Follow the path through a kissing-gate, along a residential drive and out to the road in the village of Golden Green. Cross the road and turn left to reach the Bell Inn. The “Bell Inn” (previously Greene King) is a friendly local that serves the community, especially well regarded for its food. It has tables in front and a pleasant garden in the back. The “Bell Inn” is open all day, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.
- 2 Turn right just before the pub on Victoria Road. Just before a bridge over a stream, turn left at a fingerpost and a yellow arrow on a narrow path following the stream on your right. The stream is in fact the River Bourne which flows through Ightham, Basted and Hadlow before emptying into the Medway. You are on part of the 10-mile Bourne Valley walk. Ahead of you soon is the historic Goldhill Mill and, just before the mill house, the path goes right over the stream and along the edge of a field. The Hadlow Castle folly, with its lantern hopefully now complete, is now in sight. At the end of the first large field, at a T-junction, turn right. On reaching the next field, turn left along the edge. At the corner, turn right along the edge of the field.

- 3 You reach the start of a wire fence and a post with yellow arrows. Turn left here into trees on a wide woodland path. At a post with a yellow arrow, turn off the path smartly left through a swing-gate. Keep straight ahead along the right-hand side, ignoring a white-on-green arrow on the left. The folly is once more in sight as you reach the other side and go through another swing-gate. As you join a tarmac path, veer left on it. Avoid a wooden swing-gate on the left (part of a conservation walk) and continue to meet a residential road. Keep left on the road and, at a T-junction, keep straight ahead on a tarmac path which runs past Hadlow Church. Turn right with the path to reach the High Street in the large village of Hadlow. A Portuguese restaurant is on the left and further on, past the entrance of the Castle, is the Prince of Wales. Your route, however, continues right along the main street, now called Maidstone Road.

*Hadlow was one of the first settlements in the Wealden forest with Stone Age implements evident within the parish, plus Roman coins and pottery. The Textus Roffensis (mentioned above) has the first reference to Hadlow from the year 975. Hadlow may be the birthplace of William Caxton, the first English printer. The parish church of St Mary's dates at least from 975. The mock-Gothic Hadlow Castle was built by Walter May from 1790 and in 1838 his son Walter Barton May added the tower, known as "May's Folly". The lantern was removed after the hurricane of 1987 (health and safety again) but a current restoration project has rebuilt the lantern. The restored tower offers ultra stylish accommodation and possibly Bed and Breakfast for visitors.*

Leg 6: Hadlow to West Peckham 4½ km=2½ miles

- 1 See mini-map overleaf. Continue north along the Maidstone Road out of Hadlow. You pass the Two Brewers pub on your right. After 700m, you pass the ex-Harrow pub [2016: now boarded up and for sale]. Immediately after that, turn right on narrow Cemetery Lane. After ½ km, the lane bears right past the entrance to Little Gobland Farm. Just before the lane bends right again, turn left at a fingerpost onto a footpath over a 3-plank bridge and through a small metal gate and left alongside a field.
- 2 The path passes the farm on your left and joins a farm track coming from the right. Where the track bends left, leave it to go straight ahead across the field. Your path takes you over two stiles, across a rough pasture, over a stile and along the left-hand side of a pasture, followed by another stile and pasture. The next stile leads into a garden with greenhouses belonging to Bluebell Barn on your left. Veer right as indicated by a yellow arrow, along the edge of a meadow. Turn right on the drive and left on a tarmac lane leading to the main road.

3 Cross straight over the road and through the wooden gate of Goose Green Farmhouse. (The catch is on the right and a bit tricky.) Go through another wooden gate, zigzag left-right round The Barn and continue on a path between fields, soon joining a farm track. This open space is looked after by the RSPB and you will often here the familiar call of the lapwing here. After nearly 600m between the fields, as you reach the corner of trees on your left, turn left on a track. After 80m, turn right with the track into Hazel Wood.

4 This stony woodland path takes you past a cleared area on the left and evidence of an old coppice on your right. After a pleasant walk, you emerge onto a path running between fields, then between posts on a narrow path with woodland on your left. Your path joins a farm track. Suddenly, by a large gate you are at the green in West Peckham. The oasts of Court Lodge Farm are visible on your left. Ahead of you is the church of St Dunstan. Turn right beside the church to the point where the walk began.

For final refreshments, the “Swan on the Green” is one of the most celebrated pubs in the region. It was originally built in 1526. The Swan’s own microbrewery is in the building and produces, at various times, ten different brews, including Whooper Swan and Bewick Swan. Banquet-style dishes are served in the restaurant area.

Getting there

By car: West Peckham is signposted west off the B2016 Seven Mile Lane. Take the M26 and turn off at exit 2a, signposted Wrotham. Pick up the B2016 here, following signs to Wrotham Heath, Sevenoaks and then Paddock Wood. The B2016 is the right turning off the A20 after the Vineyard Restaurant. Follow the Seven Mile Lane for about 3 miles=5 km where West Peckham is clearly signposted right at a cross-roads. At a sign proclaiming West Peckham, where the main road bends right just before the “white gates”, if you keep straight on past the white gates, there is a layby immediately on your left.

By bus/train: Yalding station is close to the walk; turn right over the level crossing and, in just 70m, between a redbrick house and a bungalow, turn left on a narrow signed footpath to join the walk in Leg 3 section 3. Buses 6 and 266 go to Nettlestead Green. Check the timetables.

fancy more free walks? www.fancyfreewalks.org