Villages, woodland, nature trails, views, romantic castle ruins

In Brief

This walk starts in one of Kent's most attractive villages, goes over the clear hills, through deep woodland and back via a romantic castle with rest and refreshments.

There are no nettles to speak of on this walk but the undergrowth can be quite high in the summer. There are only a few patches of mud in the woods, quite easy to skip around, but easier in dry weather, so any sensible clothing and footwear should be fine. Your dog can come too as the stiles have been replaced by gates.

The walk begins in the free public car park in Lamberhurst, Kent, post-code TN3 8DB, which has a WC. For more details, see at the end of this text (→ Getting There).

The Walk

Leg 1: Lunch at Kilndown 3 km=2 miles

See map overleaf. Starting in the car park next to the Chequers, go through a wooden gate at the back, straight ahead across the grass of the recreation area and between two football pitches. After those, go through the far right corner and cross a stream by a golf course. Keeping to the left side of a hedge, cross the fairway. Aim for some yellow waymarkers and a gap in the trees where there is a small bridge. Now walk straight ahead to the left-hand side of a line of trees and cross another fairway, heading for a gap in the hedge ahead. After the gap, cross a narrow crop field to reach a tarmac drive. Turn left on the drive which soon bends right and takes you over the A21 bypass road.

- [2] Just before some gates leading into a house, turn right and go along the top left-hand side of a field. In the corner, go through an opening into a meadow that belongs to the National Trust Scotney Castle estate which you will visit properly on the return leg. Over on your left, Goudhurst, the big village on the hill, is visible (see the “Goudhurst-Cranbrook” walk in this series). In 30m, go left through a swing-gate into the next meadow. Immediately, at a 3-way fingerpost, ignore a right turn and keep ahead as for the Parkland Trail. At a blue-topped post, keep ahead to a swing-gate and go along the left-hand side of a field. Keep going, all the way down, with views ahead of Kilndown Wood, until you finally go through a swing-gate to a tarmac lane.
- [3] Turn left on the lane and, in 100m, at another blue-topped post and fingerpost, go right through a swing-gate, still on the Parkland Trail (and leaving the intriguing Hop Trail). Keep on, down the left-hand side, through a swing-gate and across a meadow. A long bridge takes you over the River Bewl. At a fingerpost, keep straight ahead in the direction of Kilndown, thus leaving the Parkland Trail. Go straight across a strip of parkland to a gate taking you into woodland. A red-topped post indicates the National Trust Woodland Trail.

- 4 In 20m, at a 3-way signpost, go straight ahead. Keep following the red-topped posts, especially where the path soon veers right. Keep to the same long route through the woods, gradually uphill. Finally, at the top, you meet a track by a convenient bench. Veer left on the track, soon leaving the woodland via a swing-gate leading to the road at Kilndown. Your route now continues right on the road. However, for a lunch stop, just to your left, you will find the Small Holding pub/restaurant.

The “Small Holding” is a newly-run (2018) renaissance of the old “Globe and Rainbow” gastropub. As well as a pleasant drink with craft bottled ales, it offers an inventive menu which is partly foraged in the Nordic style. In increasing order of appetite, there are “small plates”, a “½ Acre Menu” and a “Full Acre Menu”. For reservations and enquiries, ring 01892-890-105. The “Small Holding” is closed all day Mon & Tue and Sunday after 4, open all day Fri & Sat.

On your right is the Quarry Centre, historically a wooden reading room built in 1880 for the men of the village, now a tea room open Sat 10am-2pm offering homemade cakes and a chance to rest. Ignore a footpath on the right and continue to the church.

Kilndown is an early Victorian village, established by Viscount Beresford in 1840 as an extension to his Bedgebury Estate. For more information on the unusual church, see the walk “Bewl Water and Bedgebury Forest”. The Bedgebury Panels, by the way, show four Disciples beside the image of “Ecclesia” and four Old Testament leaders beside the blindfolded “Synagoga” (supposedly failing to “see” the new Messiah).

Leg 2: Tea at Scotney Castle 2 km=1½ miles

- 5 Only 20m after the front entrance to the church, turn right by a wooden barrier, down some steps to the pond (careful ! may be slippery when wet), a well-hidden secret. Follow a path that skirts the pond. Half way round, go left up steps and left again on a wide track. Your route is basically straight ahead now for 1 km. Ignore a yellow arrow on your left and follow the path through a residents’ car parking area, then onwards through a barrier, down through trees and past a massive line of beeches. Your path joins a wider path coming in from the left. You soon pass a small house and a post with arrows and continue downhill. At the bottom of this gentle slope, at a 3-way junction, keep ahead, skirting round a partly broken large wooden gate and avoiding a path on the right. Where another path soon joins from the left, again keep ahead. You come to another junction with a red-topped post. Turn right here as indicated by the yellow and red arrows, avoiding the track left and the grassy path ahead.
- 6 Avoid turnings off to go through a gate into parkland, back on the Scotney Castle estate. Your path is shaded by some fine trees including turkey oaks. Keep ahead to go through another gate beside a wooden gate and over the River Bewl. Scotney Castle is now visible up to the right. Your path runs through a swing-gate, between fences, and over a dry bridge. Only 10m after the bridge, your path forks, giving you a choice. On the left is the official footpath. On the right, the Parkland Walk curves up to a gate by the main Scotney Castle facilities.

- 7a To visit the shop, café and entrance, keep right on the main path that curves uphill towards a fence at the top. When you reach it, go over a stile beside a white gate. Turn left and immediately fork right into the main compound. On the right is the café, shop and WCs. You do not need to buy an entrance ticket to use them. However visiting the Castle, garden and moat is an unforgettable experience.

Scotney is two buildings: the Victorian mansion, built around 1840, which is now open to the public, and the medieval castle, partially ruined, set in the middle of a moat and the most perfect photographic subject. Scotney began in the 1100s as a fortified manor house, founded by a certain Lambert de Scoteni. The old castle was built in 1378 by Roger de Ashburnham. It passed to the catholic Darrell family in the 1500s, who rebuilt much of it. In the 1800s, the castle became a deliberate romantic ruin – a kind of dramatic garden feature. The gardens are superb, with pines, azaleas, wisteria and roses. Scotney belongs to the National Trust.

After your visit, go back the way you came in, keeping to the right and following the main exit drive used by visitors' cars. After about 100m or more, look out for some steps on the right opposite a gate on the left. Turn right here up the steps into woodland.

- 7b If you do not want to visit the Castle today, take the footpath, which forks slightly left up the steepest slope of sheep pasture, in the direction of the yellow arrow. You can see a post with a yellow arrow about 100m ahead under trees. Keep straight ahead after the yellow arrow to a gate in the fence ahead. Remember to keep to the left of the walled garden. Turn left on a tarmac drive used by visitors' cars and, in about 50m, go right up some steps on a path into woodland.

Leg 3: A Drink at Lamberhurst 2½ km=1½ miles

- 8 Keep straight ahead through the woodland. (A path on the left leads to a bench overlooking a dark pond.) When the woodland ends, cross a track and go through a gate into more parkland. Keep ahead across the centre and, at a corner, maintain your direction along the left-hand side. In the far corner, at a fingerpost, turn left on a path that will be familiar to you. Go through a gate, turn right and go along the right-hand side of a field. At the far side, go left on a concrete track. In 70m, which is about 10m before a bridge, turn right, stepping over a low metal barrier, by a marker post.
- 9 Go along the left-hand side of a large field, parallel to the A21 trunk road, soon meeting a path coming from the right. When you reach the far corner, take a narrow path on the left, across a bridge over the River Teise. Turn immediately left under the A21 road (on an overgrown path!) beside the river. As you approach a crop field, fork right and take a path that goes across the centre of the field, heading for the spire of St Mary's church. At the other side, continue into the churchyard. The route is maintained by keeping left through the churchyard. However, to make a very worthwhile visit to this medieval church, you can bear right to the entrance porch and bear left again afterwards to get back on route.

- 10 Keep ahead on a straight shingle path with the celebrated golf course on your left. Finally your path joins a tarmac drive coming from Court Lodge. Just before the main road, turn left on a footpath that runs parallel to the road. Pass the old turreted School House, dating from 1877, several attractive tile-hung and weatherboard cottages, the three timbered charity cottages, the sublime Coggers Hall, an Italian restaurant, the Teise bridge and finally the Chequers Inn. The Chequers Inn is an unpretentious Shepherd Neame pub with a worthy selection of real ales, a relaxing place for walkers, where muddy boots are welcome. After final refreshments, turn left to the car park, where the walk began.

Getting there

By car: Lamberhurst is signposted just off the A21 London-Hastings road (in fact the A21 used to go through it before the bypass was built). The public car park is just after the Chequers Inn (on the left if you are coming from the London direction), clearly marked with a P sign.

By bus/train: bus 255 and 293 from Tunbridge Wells station to Lamberhurst. Bus 266 to Kilndown. Check the timetables.
