Woodland, views, green meadows, bluebells in spring

In Brief

This is an easy circular walk from Markbeech and around the gentle countryside of this part of Kent, incorporating woodland and green meadows. In bluebell time, there is an optional extension. The Kentish Horse pub is located at the start/end and the Rock pub along the way. (To reserve at the Rock, ring 01892-870296; for the Kentish Horse, ring 01342-850493.)

There are no nettles on this walk and only a little mud near the start. Your dog can also come on this adventure.

The walk begins in the centre of Markbeech, Kent, near Edenbridge, post-code TN8 5NT. There is roadside parking but, provided that you will be visiting the Kentish Horse, you can use its excellent large car park, with views of the countryside where you will be walking. You can also begin the walk at Cowden Railway Station (start at section 6). For more details see at the end of this text (→ Getting There).

The Walk

Markbeech, situated on the High Weald, is the highest point between the Chart Hills and Ashdown Forest. There has been a settlement at Markbeech at least since the Iron Age. The immediate population of Markbeech is only in the region of 100. The church of the Holy Trinity was built in 1851, financed by the local Talbot family. Its ornate decoration testifies to its "Anglo-Catholic" style.

- 1 Go east along the main road, signposted Chiddingstone Hoath, Penshurst, passing several distinctive houses. After 700m, where the main road bends sharp right at a junction, keep straight ahead by a metal gate onto a track into Newtye Hurst wood, a conservation area. (Don't worry if you find it muddy here: after one more patch, this walk is generally dry.) The woodland here is mixed, with some coppice. Note the fine replica of Eeyore's house on the right of your path. Your path narrows as it has pasture on either side, passes a metal gate and widens again to become an irregular farm track [2016: in process of being widened by earth-moving vehicles], crossing another track along the way. At the last open field, with a line of pines ahead, your path goes straight across the centre, heading for a metal gate on the edge of the trees. The gate leads you into Stock Wood, another conservation area, with silver birch, first on the left and then on both sides. Over 300m into through wood, you come to a waymarker post with yellow arrows. Turn sharp right here. Don't miss this turn.
- 2 Your path is now much narrower, winding its way through the birch wood. When you reach a large grassy meadow, continue straight ahead to a marker post on the right-hand side of a jutting piece of woodland. The path goes down into the wood by a yellow arrow. When you reach a fence, your route ascends, slightly precariously, between a fence and a bank. The path now runs along the left-hand side of two landscaped meadows, with a pond and garden on your right and a pond further to the left. When it comes up to a road, turn left. At a T-junction of roads in Hoath Corner, your route is right. However, you may like to turn left briefly to visit The Rock pub.

'The Rock' is well known for the stark pub sign featuring an unclothed lady, possibly based on the idea of the Lorelei, although remote from the original Rhenish setting. The obverse side is equally alluring. Another asset of 'The Rock' is the matchless Larkins ale. 'The Rock' is now thankfully open on Sundays.

- 3 The road goes between some interesting rock formations, common in this part of Kent. At the top, where the road comes out into the light, turn right on a track and, in 20m, turn left across the centre of a field. At the end of the field, avoid a path left, go straight ahead through scrub and holly to a fence and turn right parallel to a private drive, down to a lane. Cross the lane directly, through a modern kissing gate, to a path opposite that runs along the left-hand side of a large pasture. Near the end, ignore a metal gate directly ahead and instead fork right through another kissing gate on a narrower high path into hollies. The path goes through another kissing gate into a large beautiful sloping meadow.
- 4 Keep to the left and follow the edge of the meadow all the way down to the far corner. Go over a stile or through a metal gate and follow a pleasant level woodland path through an area known as Birchcope Shaw. In late spring, this area is dense with bluebells and wild garlic. After 170m, you reach a fork in the path, with the right fork leading downhill. If you would like to see more bluebells, with a quick visit to the immaculate timbered Bassetts, ignore the rest of this paragraph, skip to the end of this text and do the Excursion with Bluebells. Leave the level path by forking right on a narrower path downhill. The path goes over boardwalks and a bridge and comes up to a stile. After the stile, turn right in a long grassy meadow.
- 5 After going through a wide gap, shift to the left-hand side of the next meadow and, at the end, go over a stile into woodland. In spring the wood is thick on the ground with bluebells and there are several badger sets nearby from which the cubs sometimes emerge in the evening. After the wood, you come out, via a stile, into more hilly pasture. Continue steeply up the middle of the meadow to go past a marker post near the top. Continue in the same direction as far as the border hedge. Bear right alongside the hedge for about 20m to locate a short metal 4-way fingerpost (sometimes obscured by summer undergrowth). Go over a sturdy stile in the hedge and keep left across the next small meadow, heading to the left of some red tile-hung semi-detached cottages. Climb a stile in a fence which is in line with the cottages and turn left on the stony track. At the bottom, at a fingerpost, turn right on a quiet lane, Wickens Lane. At the end, turn left on a main road. You pass two service roads for Cowden Station and go under a railway bridge.
- 6 Immediately after the railway bridge, turn right over a stile on a footpath through thick woodland beside a stream. After 500m, ignore a path right, which incidentally passes over the entrance to the tunnel that runs under Markbeech (a "fantastic piece of Victorian construction" say visitors, worth a short detour). Keep straight on, soon forking right uphill past a red tiled garage. The quaint isolated cottage on your left looks top-heavy. Locals report that it is available for short rent. Keep right on the good path through the dusky woods to approach a gate into a meadow after 100m or so. Go over a (somewhat hidden) nearby stile into the meadow (which may be a little squelchy at first). Go up the left-hand side, over a stile on the left by a metal gate and continue on the other side of the fence, along the right-hand side of a large meadow. On reaching a corner, continue ahead to Markbeech church, cross a track and go over a seesaw stile into the churchyard. Go out through the lychgate to the lane by the Kentish Horse pub where the walk began.

The Kentish Horse in Cow Lane is a privately-owned friendly freehouse and the perfect place to lounge after a good walk, admiring the views from the garden or enjoying the traditional interior. Amongst the ales available is the matchless Larkins, brewed two miles away in Chiddingstone. One huge benefit of the Kentish Horse is that it is open every day from 12 noon. Food is served Mon-Sat 12-2.30 and Sun 12-3, plus Tue-Sat evenings 6.30-9.30. For reservations, ring 01342-850493.

Excursion with Bluebells

This is a short delightful extension, partly on a permissive rider's path, to see more of the spring colours of Birchcote Shaw with a visit to a remarkable timbered farm house.

Having turned right as indicated, go along the right-hand side of a meadow, over a bridge and into woods. After the woods, go over a stile into a sling meadow. Head straight up the grass, veering slightly right at the top on a faint track into the right-hand corner, passing rocks on your left. Keep going along this narrow part of the meadow. In 100m, ignore a stile over on the right by the edge of the forest. This stile is used by the main walk where comes in to join you in the meadow. Resume the walk now from section 5.
