Village, hills, views, woodland, nature reserve

In Brief

This walk takes you from an unassuming village in the Garden of England high up onto the site of an ancient hill fort with long woodland trails and great views and raw nature at its best.

Dryhill (or Dry Hill) is one of the largest Iron-Age hill forts in the South East. It was originally enclosed within three banks and ditches for protection (in a word: “tri-vallate”) but you can only see one bank now. Nevertheless, the whole structure has survived well, considering that it was built by the native Britons, before the Saxons took over the land (in fact before the Romans). It would have been a high exposed summit (170m=550 ft) with good views all around, but now of course it is tree-covered, offering some long woodland walks to visitors.

This walk could be zipped up with the walk Cowden and Dryhill: Three Manors and a View to make a wonderful 10-mile figure-of-eight hike with refreshments in Cowden.

There is just one short section with summer nettles making bare legs a little uncomfortable. Boots are recommended because of the terrain, especially in the wetter half of the year when there are some muddy sections on the tracks. This walk would be fine with your dog too.

The walk begins in the small village of Marsh Green, near Edenbridge, Kent, postcode TN8 5QN. For more details, see at the end of this text (→ Getting There).

The Walk

1 Go northwest along the main road in Marsh Green. In case you don't have a direction indicator, you should be heading for the opposite side of the village from the green and the church. You pass on your right the red, black and white clapperboard houses and a large house (the old Wheat-sheaf pub). As you leave the village, 50m after a 40 mph sign, ignore a bridleway forking left and, after another 200m, just after Brookside, turn right on a narrow footpath between fences. Go over a bridge across a stream and a stile, and follow a winding path through a bluebell wood, never straying far from the field on your left. The path leads to a tarmac driveway. Go right for 20m, towards a converted oast, barn and a timbered house with a pond and resident ducks. Turn left at the corner of a fence and over a stile onto a path between fields.

2 Your path goes right over a stile, left over a bridge and straight across the centre of a field with great views on your right of the North Downs. (Occasionally you may find crops growing here obscuring the path: you need to pick your way across the centre; when you reach the highest point, look for the flag at Starborough Castle in the distance; your route is slightly to the right of it.) At the other side, go over a (broken) stile and along the right-hand side of a meadow. On your right is the moated garden and crenellated house known as Starborough Castle. In the next corner, avoid the large wooden gate but turn left along the edge of the sheep field. For this next half of the walk, you will be in Surrey. Go through a little enclosure of metal gates (the opening is on the left) and over a stile. Turn left on the drive, away from the house. A bridge takes you over a stream. Half-way along the beech avenue, go right over a stile and take a diagonal path across the field. (Just occasionally, the field may be ploughed over. In this case, stay on the drive all the way to the main road and some lion-topped pillars, and turn right on the road, using the grass verge on the other side.) At the far side, go over a stile to the main road. Turn right on the road for 40m.

- 7 Go through a large wooden gate and continue on the concrete drive. You pass gardens and tennis court of Christmas Place and soon arrive at a bend in a tarmac drive. On your right is the pond of Christmas Place (worth a sneaky peek) but your route is left through a large metal gate (avoiding a broken stile beside the gate) and along the right-hand side of a field. Look to your right at the adjoining field and, just before it ends, go right through a gap into this field. Go left and right in the corner, ignoring a broken and disused stile. In the next corner, go past an unneeded stile and go straight across the centre of the next field, with great views of the Greensand Hills and the North Downs. At the other side, you reach a junction of tracks. Turn left, going past Manor Farm and keep straight on for the village centre where the walk began.

For end-of-walk refreshments, there are several places to eat (but no pubs) in Edenbridge. The “Royal Oak” in Crockham Hill, the “Carpenters Arms” in Limpsfield Common and many places in Westerham are on your route if you are going back north.

Getting there

By car: Marsh Green is just off the B2026 Hartfield Road, just south of Edenbridge, Kent. If coming from the London area or the M25, the easiest route is via Westerham or Oxted and the Kent Hatch Road, through Crockham Hill and Edenbridge. The turning, marked Lindfield B2028, is one mile south of Edenbridge, on a bend. Park on the roadside in the village.

By bus/train: bus 236, 636 or 646 from Lingfield Station. Check the timetables.
