Sissinghurst and Frittenden

Distance: 16 km=10 miles
Region: Kent
Author: Malinovka

Refreshments: Sissinghurst, Frittenden

Maps: Explorer 136 (The Weald) and 137 (Ashford)

Problems, changes? We depend on your feedback: feedback@fancyfreewalks.org

Public rights are restricted to printing, copying or distributing this document exactly as seen here, complete and without any cutting or editing. See Principles on main webpage.

In Brief

This is an extraordinary walk through a famous corner of Kent but where the footpaths are almost unknown. Apart from in the world-renowned garden and the villages, it is quite likely that you will not meet another person. The route navigates you carefully through Brewer’s Wood, as though on a secret quest into a neglected and awe-inspiring forest. A highlight of the walk is Sissinghurst Castle and an optional visit to the famous garden created by Vita Sackville-West. Two excellent pubs and a café will be found en route.

There are nettles and brambles on this walk and long trousers are definitely essential. In high summer the tall grass can be a little taxing before the hay harvest and because the paths are so under-used you may need to stamp down the undergrowth in one or two places, where a stick is a great asset. There is not too much mud and strong walking shoes or trainers will be fine in the drier months. Some of the stiles are narrow and a little tricky, so this walk is not ideal for a large dog.

The walk begins in the village (not the Castle) of Sissinghurst, Kent, postcode TN17 2JG. There is always some room to park on the roadside. For more details, see at the end of this text (Getting There).
The Walk

Leg 1: Sissinghurst to Brewer's Wood  2½ km=1½ miles

The name “Sissinghurst” (or “Saxenburst”) belonged to the old Manor House and then the Castle (see later). The village where you are standing was called “Milkhouse (or Mylkehouse) Street”. It had absorbed an offshoot of the Cranbrook textile industry and had gained a sordid reputation for black marketeering and riotous behaviour, stoked up by the Hawkhurst Gang. Duly shamed, local wealthy families financed the new church in 1838 and renamed the village in the 1850s. Recently the village has been transformed by tourism. The oldest house, the Post Office, became the antique shop, George Waghorne’s grocer’s shop became the Tandoori and a group of three cottages became Rankins restaurant. In a retrophile gesture, the “Bull” pub renamed itself the “Milk House”. Of the thirteen pubs originally in the parish, this and the “Three Chimneys” are the only ones that remain.

1  From the village of Sissinghurst, walk east along the main street with the Old Post Office and the Milk House on your left and Rankins restaurant on your right. You pass the church and a small layby. Immediately after the layby, turn left on a tarmac drive signed as a footpath. The drive bends right and left. Just before the gate of a water treatment works, turn left-right along the right-hand edge of an apple orchard. The path takes you across a long bridge to a junction. Ignore the swing-gate on your right (your return route) and keep ahead through woods into a large orchard. Go straight ahead along the left-hand side of the orchard for only 25m, then fork right on a diagonal path that cuts across the orchard. When you reach the other side by the corner of woodland, turn left on a wide path that runs between orchards. In 50m this path meets another path coming from the left and veers right towards a road visible ahead. At the top, go over a stile to meet Frittenden Road.

2  Turn right on the road and follow it for 500m where it bends right and comes to a road junction. Turn sharp left here on a tarmac lane, London Lane. This quiet lane runs through pleasant countryside with Comenden Manor peeping through the trees on your right. After 500m you will notice a line of poplars on your right as you see an oast and blackboarded farmhouse about 80m ahead. Follow the path between two posts, turning right and left beside wide pastures on your right. You come through a small metal gate into a small courtyard. The path ends at a large wooden gate beside a house and a main road.
Leg 2: Brewer's Wood to Knoxbridge  5 km=3 miles

1. The following sections are a remarkable route through Saunders and Brewer's Woods and you will need to concentrate; walkers have reported getting irretrievably lost in this section! Cross the road, the A229, a fraction left. Care! especially in a group. This is a busy road on a bend with no safety verge. Follow a tarmac drive for Saunders Farm, signed as a byway, past cottages. Just before a gate into the farm, veer right on a grass verge, through a large wooden gate, passing a beautiful timbered farmhouse. Continue on this lovely grassy path as far as the end of the sheep pasture on your left where the path forks. Take the left fork, staying beside the sheep pasture. The path veers off through the middle of the wood and reaches a T-junction in 30m. Turn left, going past a wooden barrier. In 40m your path meets a wide track. Turn right on this track which quickly bends left to keep your original direction.

2. You will be following this wide winding woodland track for nearly 1 km instead of the official footpaths which are all unmarked and lost in the undergrowth. The byword is: at all times keep to the main track. The track runs straight for 300m, then curves left and bends right. In nearly 100m it bends right again. In 100m it bends left again with a fenced meadow visible on your right. It shortly curves right, left and right again opposite a sign for Dray Wood. In 50m it curves right again, within sight of another meadow. Keep right here, with the meadow close by on your right. After 50m beside the meadow, the path curves left away from the meadowside. In late spring the bluebells here are so plentiful that it is impossible to avoid trampling them. After 180m straight through the wood, you may see a blue-topped post on your left. This is a misleading waymarker because you still have a little way to go within the wood. So bear right, staying on the narrow path inside the bluebell wood. In another 80m you see a wooden swing-gate on your left, a welcome confirmation that you are on the right path.

3. Go through the swing-gate, over a 2-plank bridge, keeping left over a marshy area. Your path immediately curves right through lighter woodland [2014 over a fallen tree]. You need to concentrate here to keep to the main path through trees and shrubs. In a lighter patch you pass a timely post with a yellow arrow. You come to a wide track: veer right on it. In 60m you come down to a junction of paths. Avoid a narrow path on your left into woods and go over a thin stile straight ahead by a metal gate. Keep ahead along the left-hand side of a pasture. At the first boundary continue over a bridge and diagonally left across the next small meadow, heading for a large metal gate to the right of a house (the first sign of habitation after an hour's walking). Go through the gate and turn right on a hardcore track, going immediately over a concrete bridge.

www.fancyfreewalks.org
4 Your track passes an abandoned cottage and an oast, followed by Hartridge Manor and Farm. This pleasant newly-tarmacked track rises to meet a tarmac lane at the top. Turn sharp right on the lane, soon passing the superb Paley Farm House and the neglected oasts and farm, in sad contrast to the house. In 100m you reach Mill Cottage looking immaculate with its white weatherboard. Turn left opposite the cottage through a large metal gate by a yellow arrow. Go straight along the left-hand side of the field heading for a group of large trees. At the other side, a large metal gate takes you into a charming green triangular plot with sloping grass, various trees and a stream on your left.

5 Keep ahead and turn right on a wide farmer’s path coming from a metal gate on your left, following some electrical poles. At the second pole veer left, as indicated by a yellow arrow, passing to the left of the third pole and veering towards the left-hand edge of the grass. In the extreme left-hand corner next to the stream go over a thin stile. In high summer, before the hay harvest, this path can tax the legs but you should find a path of flattened grass about 15m from the edge to make your progress easier. Another narrow leads you into another meadow. Finally, at the last meadow, go straight over, aiming just to the left of a long grey-roofed house. Here go over a stile to a main road, the A229 again. Turn right on the road and cross with care!

Leg 3: Knoxbridge to Frittenden 3½ km=2 miles

1 In 30m turn left next to the Knoxbridge Café (good value and recommended by FF walkers!) and on a tarmac drive. Ignore a track on the right and continue, soon going past the raising barrier of Friday’s, an industrial-megascale egg farm of which the less said the better. (Strictly you should turn right into a strip of woodland just before the barrier but this path is so overgrown as to be quite unusable.) Go past the barrier and immediately turn right across the grass towards a gap into the field. Do not go into the field but turn left onto an overgrown path that runs in a narrow strip of woodland. This path may seem quite impenetrable in summer and waterlogged in winter but, take heart, it quickly gets much easier. It was successfully walked to its end in high summer when the vegetation was at its densest. After 300m the path runs close to a wooden fence on your left, after which the path becomes almost pleasant to walk with tall oaks. At the end, after a brambly patch, the path suddenly comes out onto a tarmac drive by Little Wadd Farm. Turn right on the drive.

2 After 60m you pass a converted barn. Only 20m after it, go left at a yellow arrow over a long bridge with rails into a meadow. Go straight across the centre, under wires, aiming to pass the corner of a garden fence on your left. In the far corner go over a stile and along the left-hand side of another meadow. At the other side, facing a small wood, ignore a wooden gate marked Janes Wood on your left and continue round a little to the right to go through a metal gate into a sheep pasture. Turn immediately left along the left-hand side, going over a stile in the fence and another in the corner into another large meadow. The steeple of Frittenden
Frittenden Church is now in view. Go diagonally sharp left in the meadow, aiming for a solitary oak on the far left opposite side. On reaching it, go over a concrete bridge, passing the oak on your left. Maintain the same direction across the centre of the next meadow, passing a line of trees on your left, to reach the far corner. (As a guide, the church steeple should be at “2 o’clock”). Here, go through a kissing-gate and over a three-plank bridge.

3 Avoid a large wooden gate ahead and bear right on a path through a strip of woodland. Where the path ends, go right through a kissing-gate and left along the left-hand side of a pasture. As you proceed, ignore a kissing-gate on your left. Go through a kissing-gate and continue as before. At the end of the pasture, go through a gap by a pond and continue further to go through a wooden swing-gate into the churchyard of St Mary’s Frittenden. Exit the churchyard via the lichgate. Your route is right along the road, but first you will wish to visit the village. So turn left to reach the centre of the village and, at the junction, the Bell and Jorrocks pub.

Welcome to the smallest parish in the borough of Tunbridge Wells! Like the other ‘dens’, Frittenden was a clearing in the vast forest of Andred. The church was built in 1848 to replace one that burned down. The “Bell and Jorrocks” pub was named after a merger between the “Bell” and the “John Jorrocks” across the road. Here you can have a good fixed-price lunch, accompanied by a live chicken or two, and quaff one of four ales (Harveys, Woodfords Wherry + 2 guests such as Exeter Lighterman).

Leg 4: Frittenden to Sissinghurst  5½ km=3½ miles

1 After a break for refreshment, retrace your steps, passing the school and church on your right and the village stores (closed Sat from 12 and Sun). Just after the adjoining Memorial Hall, turn left on a signed footpath, through a large wooden gate and along the right-hand side of a pasture. On your left you have a view of the Frittenden Chimney and the Street Farm Oasts. At the corner, continue across the centre to a small swing-gate under an oak. Continue slightly right on a narrow path across a crop field. Biddenden church can be seen on the horizon, half left. Go through a gap in a hedge and over a 3-plank bridge, then across another crop field towards an electricity pole. Under the pole your path divides. Take the right-hand option, walking beneath wires. At the other side, keep straight on avoiding several farm tracks and take a path straight across the crop field to a stile under an oak, 150m from the corner. Go right over this stile (or step over a low fence) and go straight across an attractive meadow, aiming for a stile visible on the left-hand side of a line of trees. Go over this stile and cross a hay field, slightly left, passing a solitary tree to a metal gate in the far corner. Go over a stile and turn right on Sand Lane.
You pass a pond on your right and, after only 300m on this quiet lane, you reach a junction with Digdog Lane. Go straight over on a bridleway, passing a stonemason on your right, all that is left of the old brickworks, and Old Brickyard Cottage on your left. Continue straight ahead along the right-hand side of a field and, in 50m, step over a log to take a path between hedges. After 600m you reach a junction with a wide stony path (very muddy in winter unfortunately). Turn left here on the path, passing the vegetable plots of Sissinghurst Garden and quickly reaching the entrance gate to Sissinghurst Castle. Go right through the impressive gate into the grounds. The restaurant and ticket office are on your right. The entrance to the garden itself is on your left, through the tower.

In the 1200s Sissinghurst Castle was a modest moated manor belonging to a pig farmer. The castle was the creation of Sir John Baker in the mid-1500s. In the Seven Years War (1756-1763) it was rented out as a prison to house 3000 French sailors. Cruelly treated by guards in overcrowded conditions, the sailors trashed the building, burning and looting the fine architecture. The remains of the castle were acquired by Vita Sackville-West of the Bloomsbury Group in the 1930s, moving here from Knole (see the walk “Knole and Ightham” in this series). She and her husband Harold Nicolson established the gardens that you see today, organised as a series of “rooms” each with a surprise element. The garden is open daily, for an entrance fee, free to NT members.

After possibly visiting the garden, go past the restaurant and visitor reception and continue on the track passing a coffee and garden shop. Keep ahead along the right-hand side of the car parks until you come out through a gap in the hedge into an orchard. Take a diagonal path to your left through the orchard to the opposite corner. (If in doubt, go round two sides.) Go through a small wooden gate in the corner into a sheep pasture. In 50m, go left through a small wooden gate, down the left-hand side of a meadow. At the far side, go through a swing-gate, over a bridge, through hawthorn and holly. As you come down to a wide track, turn right on it.

Your path winds through a chestnut wood and you may need to be alert to keep to the path. You go past a pond and a forest of birch on your right. Finally your path goes through a wooden swing-gate to meet a crossing path. Turn left over a long bridge (familiar from the outward leg) and up the left-hand side of an apple orchard. In the corner, go through a gap and continue on a drive coming from a water treatment plant. The drive bends right and left to reach the main road. Turn right on the footway, passing Sissinghurst church and the Milk House pub in the village where the walk began.

For final refreshments, the Milk House is an innovative pub / hotel in clean nordic style offering pizzas on the terazza and, since this is farming country, a grazing menu. Best of all, the Milk House is always open.
Getting there

By car: Sissinghurst is just off the A229 road from Maidstone. Alternatively, it can be reached via the A21 and Goudhurst.

By bus/train: bus 5 runs from Maidstone or Staplehurst station to Sissinghurst, hourly or two-hourly on Sunday. Check the timetables.

fancy more free walks? www.fancyfreewalks.org