Woodland, river, heath, ponds

In Brief

This woodland walk begins by a quiet village pond near Esher, Surrey and quickly develops into a wild ramble along the River Mole and then over beech- and pine-clad hills. It also takes in all six ponds of this part of Esher Common, some hidden deep in the woods. The woodland, river and ponds are attractive at any time of the year.

The walk begins beside the West End Pond, grid ref 129639, postcode KT10 8LJ. To get there from the A3 road, turn off for Cobham or Esher, take the A307 Portsmouth Road that runs between Esher and Cobham and turn onto Hawkshill Way or West End Lane to reach the village pond. Alternatively, if you know the area, take Lammas Lane from the centre of Esher. Park in Winterdown Road where there is plenty of off-road parking. There is more parking space further up Winterdown Road, past the entrance to Garsons.

An alternative start is the West End Lane car park which is on the left just off a side road from the A307 opposite the entrance to Claremont, postcode KT10 9JG. If you start here, leave by a small path between uprights in the fence (not the wide path by the noticeboard on its left), follow it to a T-junction and turn right, joining the walk at section 7. You could combine this walk with a visit to the picturesque Claremont Landscape Garden and Lake with its wonderful landscaping and a good café/restaurant. Simply exit the car park and turn right to the main road.

Another possible starting point is the Horseshoe Clump car park, on the A307, opposite the entrance to Black Hills, very approximate postcode KT10 9JW, grid ref TQ 124 627.

The route has a few steep sections with board walks where slipperiness can be a problem. Good solid waterproof footwear should be fine and there are no nettles or stiles. Dogs are very welcome.

The Walk

- 1 Head along the green next to Winterdown Road beside the West End Pond with its huge population of ducks, that sometimes roil around your feet hoping for bread. After the pond, diverge gradually away from Winterdown Road aiming for a bench seat visible at the treeline ahead and, as you begin to make out details, for a path going left into the woods by a large pond, 30m to the left of the seat. The pond on your left is the large Half Penny Pond, one of six in this area, all skimmed by dragonflies in summer and hosting numerous protected types of wildlife. Just after the pond, keep ahead through a wooden barrier on a very long straight path that runs beside a ditch. Exactly 200m on, you reach a crossing path with stone blocks [Aug 2015: less clear now due to path restoration work]. Turn right here. Ignore all minor paths leading off and keep to the main winding path as it runs along the right-hand edge of a well-lit area of tall thin oak trees. Soon you have the filmy Margy Pond on your left.
- 2 Just after the pond, avoid a narrow left fork. (The left fork, over a 2-plank bridge, is a short cut to the Lardy Pond but it was removed from these notes because the ground is often waterlogged.) Keep to the main path which soon has a ditch on its left. It leads to a tarmac lane. Turn left and immediately fork left on a wide forest path. Continue to the end where there is a T-junction and a noticeboard. Turn left, going through a wooden barrier, on the wide track which runs along the edge of the common with crops on the other side. In about 400m you will see a little 2-plank bridge. Fork left over the bridge and go sharp left over a 4-plank bridge to the Lardy Pond, another beautiful hidden-in-the-forest pond. Now retrace your steps back to the wide track, staying on the right next to the crop field and going gently up a slope. As the field ends and the track begins to enter the deep forest ahead, turn right on a good side path so that you still have the fence on your right.
- 3 The path leads up to a promontory with a bench with a fine view of the River Mole below. Just before the promontory, veer left towards wooden barriers and steps. The steps are supported by railings and they lead down to the bank of the river. (For more information on the River Mole, see the walk in this series “Box Hill, Mole Valley, Mickleham Downs”.) Turn left along the river side and follow it for some distance. You pass a bench and you need to traverse several steps and beautifully restored boardwalks. They may be slippery after wet weather, so special care is needed. The path runs past a memorial bench under grid lines (possibly unseen above the trees) and reaches a fingerpost that points left to steps and carpark. Keep straight ahead along the riverside, ignoring the signpost.

- 4 The path goes over a sunken ditch and finally ends at another watery ditch with a fence ahead. Turn left here. The path now goes over an awkward ditch (where an old bridge was washed away, now a chaos of a fallen birch and debris) and climbs. This section may also be slippery. You now reach a sloping beechwood. Go straight up the steepest part of the beechwood and continue through rhododendrons, reaching a fence. Keep the fence on your left, with a steep drop visible on your right. Finally, the path descends steeply with the fence and goes over a little bridge with a railing. After the bridge, your path goes very slightly uphill with a wire fence on your left. It winds to the right to avoid fallen branches. 20m to your left you see a new wire fence. You need to keep the same distance from this fence as you veer left uphill on a snaking path, going over a diagonal crossing path and continuing uphill. In 30m you meet a wider crossing path. Turn left uphill through a gap in a bank. If you are uncertain of the way, remember that the idea is simply to go round the fenced enclosure on your left. This path goes up over a high point and then down, passing the fenced enclosure again, reaching a fingerpost.

- 5 At the fingerpost, keep straight ahead in the direction horse ride West End Common, crossing a tarmac drive. In 200m, the path goes over another tarmac drive, curves left, goes over a stream and winds uphill, touching the drive again. Veer right away from the drive, staying on the horse ride. The path reaches a wide crossing path. On your right is a large white studio-style modern house, The Homewood.

The Homewood is an early masterpiece (1938-39) by the modernist architect Patrick Gwynne who acknowledged Le Corbusier and Mies van der Rohe as his influences in its lean lines and its use of modern materials. Before his death, he gave the house to the National Trust. The Homewood can be visited by a pre-booked guided tour on certain Fridays and Saturdays in the warmer months, by mini-bus from Claremont.

- 6 About 300m after the grid wires, you reach a Y-junction by a post with a red-white badge and “No. 36”. Keep left on the main path which suddenly curves away left down into the valley. Keep straight on at a left-pointing fingerpost, to reach a T-junction at the bottom by a wooden bench. Turn right here on a wide path. The path goes over a hump and gradually curves left, being joined by several paths coming down from the right, entering an open space. 50m into the open space, you reach a major fork. (If you parked in the West End Lane car park, take the right fork; otherwise ...) Take the left fork, the more grassy option.

Soon you reach a gap in a fence with steps down to the Ash Pond, now only a large puddle. Continue along a straight path running into the distance between two ditches. In about 200m, you reach a wide crossing path, which will be familiar if you started in the village. Turn right here. The path leads to West End Lane. Turn left on the road, beside the the final pond, Chequers Pond, leading to the village green where the walk began. At the end of the green, the Prince of Wales pub is a possible refreshment stop. The Prince of Wales has an appealing Regency look with a view of the pond and the green. For food, Esher town centre, Hersham or Cobham are also good prospects.
