

---

Windsor Great Park and Runnymede

---

Distance: 11½ km=7 miles

easy walking

Region: Surrey, Berkshire

Date written: 12-feb-2012

Author: Botafuego

Last update: 13-mar-2018

Refreshments: Englefield Green

Map: Explorer 160 (Windsor) but the maps in this guide should be sufficient

Problems, changes? We depend on your feedback: feedback@fancyfreewalks.org

Public rights are restricted to printing, copying or distributing this document exactly as seen here, complete and without any cutting or editing. See Principles on main webpage.

Royal park, lake, river, historical monuments

---

In Brief

---

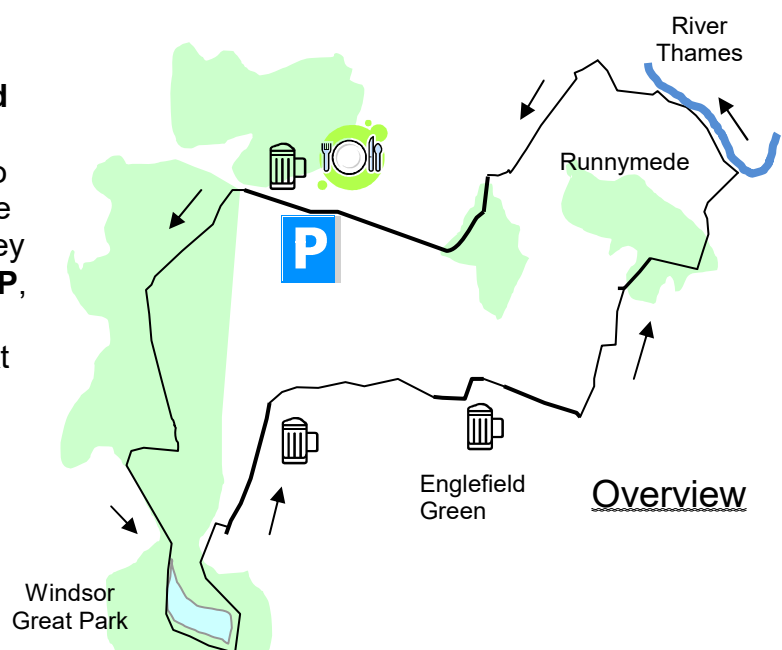

This is a most unusual and adventurous walk that connects the River Thames at Runnymede, with its various memorials, to Windsor Great Park, making a truly satisfying excursion, with some good places for refreshment along the way.

Because the spread-out village of Englefield Green lies between the areas of interest, a certain amount of road walking is unavoidable, more than we usually allow for these walks. However, the roads are pleasant and quiet with good pavements and the rewards on reaching the Thames and the Park are high enough to make it definitely worthwhile.

Any kind of dress and footwear is fine, although stout boots are preferable if it has been wet. A stick (hiking pole) will be useful in slippery conditions. Your dog is welcome, with a lead of course.

The walk begins at the end of Bishopsgate Road, Englefield Green, Surrey, near the Fox and Hounds pub/restaurant, post-code TW20 0XU. If there are no spaces here, anywhere along the route is fine, for example in Barley Mow Road, postcode TW20 0NP, in Englefield Green. For more details, see at the end of this text (→ Getting There).

The Walk

Leg 1: Round the Pond to the Sun 4½ km=2¾ miles

- 1 Windsor Great Park is a vast space, hardly a park in the usual sense, with endless scope for adventure. This first part gives you a flavour of the best of the park. Walk along Bishops-gate Road, with the Fox and Hounds on your left, through the magnificent white gates and into the Park (and incidentally into a corner of Berkshire). Just 50m into the Park, turn left on a narrow path, avoiding a horse track to its left, where pedestrians are not allowed. The path runs under oaks (sometimes waterlogged in winter: if so, keep to the gravel path on your left, passing the Cow Pond), over a small wooden bridge and beside a ditch on your left. It then goes over another wooden bridge, veers left over a ditch and crosses a horse path. As you enter a more open space with scattered oaks, keep left on a good path beside the wood on your left. This path takes you to the head of a T-junction of gravel tracks. Keep straight on along the track ahead. The Cow Pond can be seen on the left at this point, worth a brief diversion. The track runs through an arboretum, a most interesting section of the Park, with more oaks. Windsor Great Park is dotted with plantations of assorted, sometimes exotic, trees, reminiscent of Kew Gardens. There are various conifers on each side, then a collection of Japanese maples. Eventually you come to a T-junction with a tarmac drive. Turn sharp right on it.

- 2 In about 250, as the drive curves right in front of a large house, turn left on a narrow path towards a large open green space. Turn left again on a wide grassy ride that runs down an avenue of trees towards the tall obelisk monument visible in the distance. You reach an arm of the Obelisk Pond. Fork right here on a wide path along the right-hand bank of the pond. In about 300m, the path begins to curve left around a corner of the lake and, after a similar distance, reaches a corner and tarmac track. Turn left here. Soon you reach a picnic area and a tea kiosk next to the Obelisk.

The Obelisk was built in honour of the Duke of Cumberland who was Ranger from 1746. He was the major landscaper of the Park, responsible for Virginia Water, many buildings and bridges and a huge number of native and exotic trees. He also happened to be son of the king (George II) and butcher of the Scots at Culloden.

Continue on the tarmac, going past the Savill Garden car park on your right, soon with the entrance to the Savill Garden on your left.

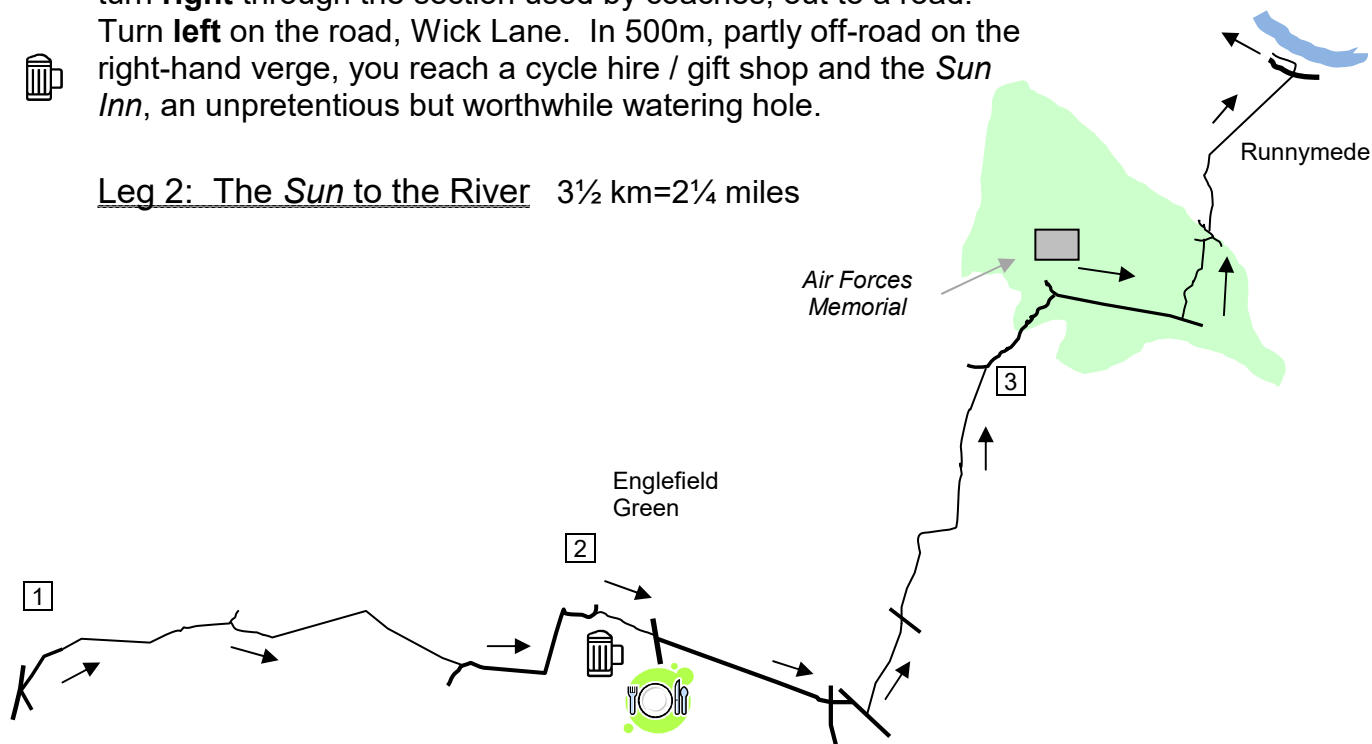

The Savill Garden is named after its creator of the 1930s, Sir Eric Savill. It is one of England's truly great gardens. Once inside, you see tantalizing signposts to distinctive areas such as The Glades, The Hidden Gardens, The New Zealand Gardens and so on. The new Rose Garden was opened in 2010 and uses an innovative approach to display. The Garden is open every day. It also has a restaurant.

Keep going till you are next to the far end of the car park and turn right through the section used by coaches, out to a road. Turn left on the road, Wick Lane. In 500m, partly off-road on the right-hand verge, you reach a cycle hire / gift shop and the Sun Inn, an unpretentious but worthwhile watering hole.

Leg 2: The Sun to the River 3½ km=2¼ miles

- 1 Ignore the sharp right turn (Kings Lane) and take the track, Prospect Lane, diagonally right. The track leads you through a wooden swing-gate onto a path by a fence, followed by two similar gates. When you reach a bend in the path, ignore a path on your left and simply follow the path to the right of the third swing-gate. At the end, go through another swing-gate and proceed diagonally across a meadow to the right. Go through a small wooden gate on the other side, over a stream and then straight ahead beside a wire fence. Go through another swing-gate, between fences and, at the end, through a wooden gate to a road. Turn left on the road, Northcroft Road. This quiet residential road bends left and right and reaches the grassy expanse of Englefield Green. Close by on your right is the Barley Mow, a pub in a delightful situation overlooking the Green. The Barley Mow was closed for refurbishment (as a gastropub!) from 4 July to Nov/Dec 2016 and walkers report signs that it is open in 2017! The Barley Mow has as many as five real ales on tap. In case the tables in the front are occupied, there is a generous back garden. Interestingly (our Continental friends please note!) most of the (very good) on-line reviews all complain that the beer is too cold.

- 2 Keep right past the pub, cross the main road and go down Barley Mow Road opposite. The road passes a school and a side road and, in 350m, reaches a road junction. Go straight ahead over a major road and take a signposted footpath between metal bars. The footpath crosses a road, Tite Hill, and continues opposite. It then crosses a drive, becomes tarmac, curves right and bends left again. You emerge on a tarmac drive and out to Coopers Hill Lane, next to Kingswood Hall of Residence, part of Royal Holloway College. There is a dense academic presence in this area: part of Brunel University is only 300m west on the same road. Just 50m to the left, though not strictly on your route, is the entrance to the Air Forces Memorial which is definitely worth visiting. The Air Forces Memorial is dedicated to more than 20,000 British and Commonwealth airmen who were lost in World War II. Their names are displayed on the pillars, amongst bronze sculptures, engraved glass and decorative ceilings.

- 3 Turn right on Coopers Hill Lane and continue where it becomes a dirt track. At a bend, ignore a footpath on the left by a National Trust sign and stay on the track. Just after you pass a gate with resident's driveway on your right and the beginning of a wooden fence, turn left just before two upright posts, through a wooden barrier on a narrow unsigned path. This path takes you down many steps. (Take great care after wet weather: some walkers use the banks each side which may be covered in leaves and less muddy.) As you proceed, a large meadow and a narrow pond come into view. At the bottom, on reaching a wide level path, cross this wide path, a fraction left, to go through a swing-gate into the meadows of Runnymede (possibly very runny after heavy rain). The path crosses the meadow diagonally to another swing-gate, follows a board walk and passes the Langham Pond where there is an information tablet about Runnymede. It then enters another meadow by a swing-gate. (In winter this area may be waterlogged and you may have to climb over the fence to your right where there is a drier patch and some wood.) Go straight across this large meadow, aiming for the road at the right-hand corner. Exit through a swing-gate beside a large wooden gate and cross the busy road carefully. On your right is the Runnymede car park with its café and toilets. However, your route is left along the riverside.

Leg 3: The River to the Park Gates 3¼ km=2 miles

- 1 You now follow the river for a leisurely 600m. Ignore fingerposts on the left, one of which points to the Air Forces Memorial, visible on the hill, and stay as close as you like to the river, watching the river craft go by. This is a particularly peaceful stretch of the river. Eventually you reach a noticeboard shaped like a horizontal triangle containing leaflets. Turn left here and cross the road to a swing-gate on the other side. Ignore both footpath signs and turn right diagonally across the big grassy meadow heading for some wooden gates in the distant corner. Once there, go through a swing-gate and along boards past a multi-coloured post, then left at another post to the Memorial to the document known as Magna Carta drawn up by the English barons in 1215.

In fact the Memorial stands here in Longmede, not Runnymede, but the fractious meeting between King John and the barons took place on the other side of the river on Magna Carta Island. The hesitant king was caught between the wrath of his barons and of the Pope. This “great charter” written in Latin established that the king could not exercise arbitrary power but had to defer to the law of the land. It was therefore the first document of English constitutional law. One of the witnesses was the Pope’s representative Stephen Langton (see the “Friday Street” walks in this series). It was another century before the document was formally written up and put into law. Three of its clauses are still on the books. The memorial was commissioned in 1957 by the American Bar Association and designed by the English architect Sir Edward Maufe.

- 2 Leave the Memorial enclosure and turn left, thus continuing your route, ignoring any coloured arrows pointing away from the edge. On your left soon is an oak planted with soil from Jamestown, Virginia, commemorating 200 years of the Constitution of the USA which was influenced by Magna Carta. Avoid another small bridge on your left and continue another 30m. Here you will see a new artwork, “the Jurors”, twelve intricately worked bronze chairs inscribed with symbols representing law and equal rights (see artatrunnymede.com: if you have a smartphone, you can download an audioguide). Turn left here at a marker post through wooden gates up a cobbled path and many shallow steps, leading to the John F Kennedy Memorial.

This monument to American President John F Kennedy, assassinated in 1963, was opened by Queen Elizabeth and Jackie Kennedy in May 1965. The portland stone memorial tablet was designed and inscribed by sculptor Alan Collins.

After the JFK memorial, continue straight ahead on a footpath, marked with a yellow arrow. The path passes a house on the left and continues ahead on a tarmac drive with some of the grounds of Brunel University on your left. After 500m, at the end, turn left on a main road, using a pavement on the other side. In 150m, turn right on Castle Hill Road and stay on it as it curves round to the left. (There are no useful paths through the woods here but they are enjoyable from the road.) At a crossroads turn right on Bishopsgate Road, using the generous pavement. You pass Bishopsgate School and several fine houses. When you reach the oblique turnings for Crimp Hill and Wick Lane, keep straight ahead, quickly arriving back at the roadside parking area, reassuringly close to the Fox and Hounds, where the walk began.

Getting there

---

By car: the following directions take you to the start at Bishopsgate Road from the M25. Leave at exit 13 (A30 Staines). Follow the sign for Bagshot, Egham, going on a slip road parallel to the M25 for a while. (If you came in the clockwise direction, this means doubling back parallel to the way you came.) Keep in the left lane so that you don't re-join the M25 and go round the cloverleaf, under the M25 to the big Runnymede roundabout. Take the second left, the A30 signposted Basingstoke Camberley. Just after the art-deco garage, at the next roundabout, leave the A30 by turning right into Tite Hill. Follow Tite Hill all the way to a T-junction and turn right into Middle Hill. This road quickly takes you to a mini-roundabout by a very large green at Englefield Green. Go right and immediately left on Bishopsgate Road. Follow Bishopsgate Road to its end, near the Fox and Hounds and park on the left, at right-angles to the road.

By bus/train: bus 71 from Windsor or Staines station runs to Englefield Green (also Sundays). You can get out at Coopers Hill Lane, directly on the walk.

fancy more free walks? www.fancyfreewalks.org