In Brief

This is a dazzling, mainly woodland, circular picnic walk on some familiar and some lesser-known paths in Surrey, on the North Downs with a wide excursion into the Polesden Estate and Ranmore Common. In autumn the colours are magnificent, in summer the shade is cool, in spring the bluebells are on show and in the winter the views are enhanced, so this walk is ideal for any season.

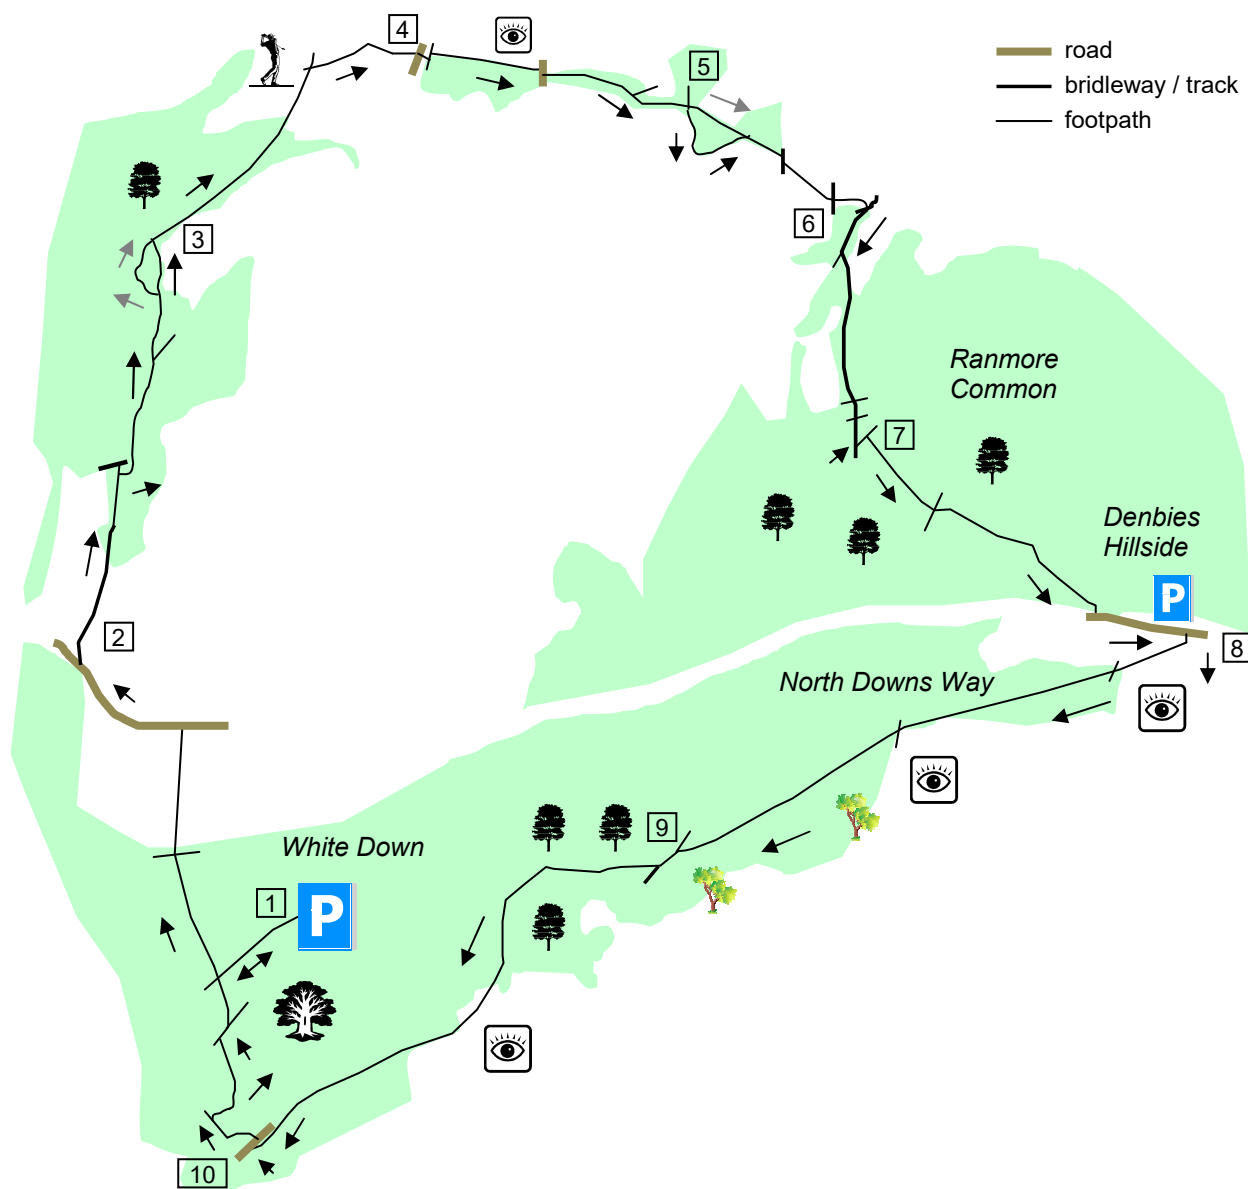

There are very few nettles on this walk, so shorts can be worn. The North Downs Way is quite easy and dry underfoot but there are a few rougher patches on the tracks in Ranmore Common, so boots are recommended in winter. Your dog is very welcome on this walk, because of the open woods and the two dog-friendly stiles.

The walk begins at the White Down car park, grid ref 115 495, very approximate postcode RH5 6SX, in Whitedown Lane north of Abinger, Surrey. Another suitable starting point is the Denbies Hillside NT car park on the Ranmore Common Road, postcode RH5 6SP. For more details, see at the end of this text (→ Getting There).

The Walk

- 1 See map overleaf. From the back of the car park, follow the main wide path for 250m through beechwoods to a fingerpost and a crossing path. Turn right here on a bridleway, a stony and sandy path through a woodland of mainly birch, avoiding any side paths made by forestry vehicles. In 400m, you reach a major crossing path. Continue straight over on a footpath running along a narrow strip of trees between two fields. The last few metres are beside the garden of Red Gables, through a small wooden gate and along a driveway, via a stile or gate, to the Crocknorth Road. Turn left on the road and follow it, making use of the grass verge where possible, for 400m until you see a fingerpost. Turn right here on a bridleway.
- 2 The path is soon tarmac with a central grass strip, making the going easy. You soon pass The Old Malthouse, ignoring a footpath on the right. Leave the drive where it bends right to a second house and continue straight ahead on a narrow path beside a meadow on your right. This takes you to a track in front of a converted farm building. Turn right at a post with blue arrows into Long Wood on a path which quickly bends left. In 300m your path forks with different coloured arrows on a post. Take the left fork, following the yellow arrow, the footpath. In another 200m you reach a stile into a meadow. The official route is over the stile, along the left-hand side of the meadow, left over another stile, back into the woods and right. However, if you want to avoid the stiles, you can turn left on a narrow path 10m before the stile which snakes its way round several fallen trees and reaches the same point.

- 3 Your path goes through Six Acre Copse past some metal gates, between wire fences for a short stretch and then left-right over a bank. Eventually you come out, with terrific views, to some links belonging to the Effingham Golf Club. Cross the fairway carefully, a fraction right aiming to the immediate left of a sand bunker, to a marker post with a yellow arrow. The post is just on the left of a small copper beech. Follow the path into a small wood and, in just 20m, at a crossing path and another post, turn right. Your path crosses a wide path and quickly comes out of the wood back onto the links. Cross over dead straight to the end of a hedgerow 40m away where there is another marker post, and go sharp right onto a short gravel path leading to a new wooden gate and a wide grassy path. Follow the path beside the neo-Tudor Robinswood out to the road, Beech Avenue.
- 4 Cross the road to a footpath opposite. Turn left at a T-junction for just 10m and then go right on a path which runs along the right-hand side of a large meadow giving you views of London. At the far end your path meets a tarmac lane, High Barn Road. Turn right on the lane for only 5m and immediately go left on a wide cinder bridleway to the right of some gates, between a hedge and a fence. This path runs through woodland giving you glimpses of green meadows on each side. Soon you pass a stile and a yellow arrow on the left. The route is straight ahead on the main track ignoring the stile. After nearly 200m more, you reach a major junction with a wooden fence and a new wooden gate on your left.

- 5 Most walkers now continue straight ahead on the track beside the meadow on your left, which you could also do. However, there is an atmospheric yew grove here which is much more interesting, and this is the route chosen for this walk. Turn right opposite the wooden gate on a narrower path into woods. The path follows a clear but extremely twisty route through trees, curving right round yews and passing some more ancient yew trees. Eventually you come out to a major crossing track. Turn right on it, thus resuming your original route. The flinty path goes downhill past the sweeping pastures of the Polesden Estate on your right. (For more details of the house and gardens of Polesden Lacey, see the other walks in this series, "Effingham and Polesden Lacey".) At a T-junction, turn right on a track but, in only 20m, fork left through a small wooden gate. The grassy path goes uphill heading for a convenient bench and gate at the top. From here you have fine views back over the terrain you have been covering and possibly a well-deserved breather.

- 6 Go through the wooden gate, cross a track and go up through another small wooden gate directly ahead. Keep along the top right-hand edge of this small meadow from where you have views of the House. At the far corner, go right through a small wooden gate to a junction of tracks. Avoid a track curving away on your right and go straight ahead on a very wide stony track, with the red brick wall of Yew Tree Farm close by on your left. On your left soon is a NT sign and gate into the Orchard, a good picnic spot, although you need to return the same way. At a 3-way fingerpost keep ahead, avoiding a footpath that forks right. The track follows an easy upward gradient. Soon, on your left is a bench giving you a clear view of Polesden Lacey. As you continue, avoid tracks right and left, soon passing a bench on the right. You need to concentrate a little now as the next turning is easily missed. After the field on your left ends, pass a marker post on the right and a wooden barrier on your left and continue on regardless for 50m. Here, ignore footpaths left and right with a wooden barrier on your left, and stay on the wide track for another 80m. Here there is a wooden barrier on the left only and a new fingerpost with insect symbols pointing left to some nature walks. Turn sharp left here.

- 7 In only about 30m, take the first path sharp right following a blue NT arrow, thus leaving the butterfly and dragonfly route. You are following a path through the magnificent mature woodland in the deepest part of Ranmore Common and it is yours to enjoy for nearly 1 km. You descend very gradually, then more steeply to a flinty crossing path. Cross it and go up steeply through a gap in a wooden barrier. The wood thickens to a stunning beechwood and rises to go through a clearing made by a fallen beech. The wood canopy is now tall oaks for some distance until finally you reach the Ranmore Common Road at a junction of tracks by a tile-hung cottage. Turn left along the grass verge parallel to the road. Turn right opposite a house on the other side to cross the road and continue to the NT car park at Denbies Hillside (an alternative starting point). The steeple of St Barnabas' church is visible ahead. On a good day (Sundays only November to April), Sheryl's mobile café may be open for tea, (very good) coffee and snacks.

- 8 Go through the wooden gate by the noticeboard onto the open hillside and picnic area known as Steer's Field, with fabulous views across the valley to the Greensand Hills, including the Leith Hill tower at the highest point. Turn diagonally right on a path that runs just to the left of some carved tree trunks, heading for trees. On reaching them, go through a swing-gate onto a wide path into woods. This is the North Downs Way (NDW), a long-distance path from Farnham to Dover, and you will be following it to near the end of the walk. Immediately cross straight over a signposted diagonal path and follow the wide straight level path. In 700m, you pass a wooden barrier and swing-gate on your left where there is a bench for gazing at the views of Westcott below and Dorking on the left. Shortly, at a junction, keep straight ahead on a level path. The trees are now yews and tall slender beeches and this long level stretch is the loveliest part of the North Downs. At another 4-way fingerpost, keep ahead over a bridleway. The path twists, rises and narrows, taking a more tenuous course under beeches with a steep drop on your left [2015: over several fallen trees trunks]. Eventually your path joins a wide path coming from the right and the flinty banked path comes down to a wooden gate beside a metal gate to a junction of tracks by a wartime pillbox. The pillboxes were constructed in 1940 as a defensive line against German invasion, partly to keep the Canadian troops occupied; many of the pillboxes are still preserved.

- 9 At the junction, take the right fork, a rising path, still on the NDW. You have a change now to open hillside, dotted with hawthorn and other shrubs, with a good view left across the valley. Park Farm, with its cream-coloured house, is in the valley and, up a little to its left, is Wotton church (see the walk Abinger and Wotton in this series). The path goes through a swing-gate, now narrower, with slender beeches again and another pillbox on your right. Open hillside alternates with beeches for some distance with the occasional pillbox. Finally the path bends right down to a road, White Downs Lane. Turn right carefully on the road.
- 10 In only 10m, turn left on a signposted path uphill, still on the NDW. At the top of the slope, the path bends left, then right again. After only 50m more, 15m after a bent-over yew tree, turn right steeply uphill on an unmarked path, thus leaving the NDW. The path winds up through a coppice, soon with a steep drop on your right. As the path levels out after about 100m, just after a tall thin beech, stay on the main path as it bends left away from the precipice. Your path soon joins a path coming from the left and becomes much wider. You are now in dense beech and ash woods. On your left soon is a fenced-off water reservoir. At a T-junction by a corner of the fence, turn right on a wide path. In 30m, by a white arrow on a post, fork left on a narrower path. On your right soon is a magnificent great beech with one fallen branch. You are in Old Simm's Copse, an area famed for its bluebells. (See the White Down Bluebell Walk in this series.) Soon you reach a 4-way junction with a fingerpost which, if you started at White Down, will be familiar. (If you began the walk in Denbies Hillside, go straight ahead at the junction and resume the walk at the start of this text ignoring the first sentence and the right turn.) Turn right at the crossing path, quickly arriving back at the car park where the walk began.

Getting there

By car: The White Down car park is near the north end of White Downs Lane, which is at a crossroads with Crocknorth Road / Ranmore Common Road. From Dorking, follow signs to Ranmore Effingham, follow the road, ignoring three right turns, for 3 miles (5 km) to a crossroads and turn left. You can also take the A246 Green Dene from East Horsley, forking left on Crocknorth Road after ½ mile, in which case you turn right at the crossroads after more than a mile. If coming from the London area, one scenic way is as follows. Take the A3 to the M25 junction and leave the A3 there by the slip road, taking the middle lane. At the roundabout, go straight ahead, signposted Guildford, as though you had changed your mind and wanted to re-join the A3. In about 100m, leave the slip road by turning left onto a narrow road signposted Effingham that runs through the forest by a lake on the right. Follow the road all the way to a T-junction. Turn right and immediately left over a humpback bridge and past Effingham Junction station. Follow the road all the way to Bookham and Effingham villages, going straight ahead at two mini-roundabouts. Go over traffic lights over the main A246 and follow a rather narrow road that runs past some fine properties, down a valley and up again, and straightens and narrows even more to a crossroads (with Ranmore Common Road and Crocknorth Road) where you must give way. Go straight over. The White Down car park is 0.4 mile (600m) on the right. (Note: going back, you cannot turn right onto the A3, so you need to turn left (for Ockham) or right (for Cobham) at the Black Swan.)
