

Loxwood: The Onslow Arms (pub walk)

Distance: 5¾ km=3½ miles

easy walking

Region: West Sussex

Date written: 24-jun-2011

Author: Moussehaine

Last update: 29-jan-2017

Refreshments: The Onslow Arms

Map: Explorer 134 (Horsham) but the map in this guide should be sufficient

Problems, changes? We depend on your feedback: feedback@fancyfreewalks.org

Public rights are restricted to printing, copying or distributing this document exactly as seen here, complete and without any cutting or editing. See Principles on main webpage.

Canal, woodland, mill, village

In Brief

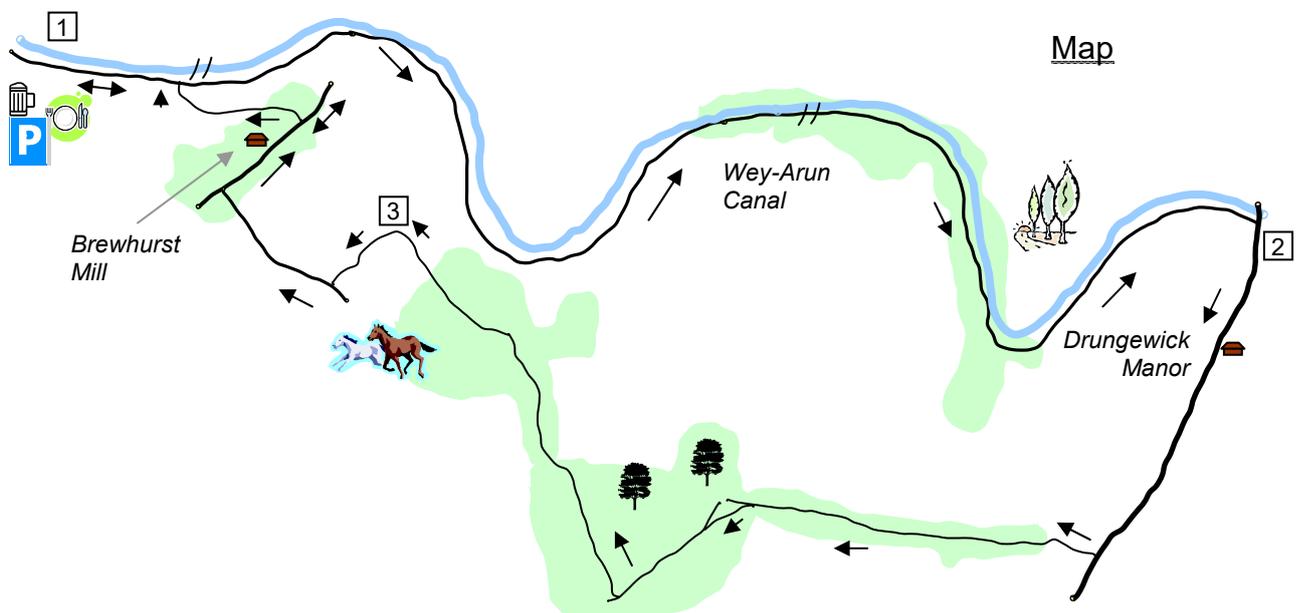

Perfectly situated for the Wey-Arun Canal, the Onslow Arms offers Badger (plus one or two guest) ales and a pleasant seating area by the canal. Food doesn't quite match the lovely setting, but they do provide cream teas.

This walk follows the canalside path and returns through forest and quiet meadows with one or two surprises.

There are no nettles so any type of clothing should be fine. If it has been raining, you may find the woodland sections a bit claggy and marshy so that boots are preferable. This is also a perfect walk for your dog.

The walk begins at the Onslow Arms, Loxwood, West Sussex (postcode RH14 0RD, grid ref TQ041312). Park in the rear car park. For more details, see at the end of this text (→ Getting There).

The Walk

- 1 From beside the pub, go past the car park along the wide canal path. In the 19th century this canal made it possible to travel by boat from London to Littlehampton on the south coast. Much of it has now been restored by The Wey & Arun Canal Trust and you may notice boat trippers on this large navigable section. In a short while you pass Brewhurst Lock. In 1997, this lock was restored to its original size, a huge undertaking. This is a most unusual lock in that the large “lower” gates are much higher than the small “upper” gates. This is because the section of the canal you were just walking on had to be lowered to run under the main road. Continue along the canal and cross a drive near a smart brick humpback bridge, continuing on the other side through a wooden gate. The original river (a tributary of the Arun) winds its serpentine way on your right as the path runs under tall ash trees and you pass a milestone, one of several giving you the distances between the two rivers. Next is Baldwin’s Knob Lock, the first to be restored. After tall poplars on your right you pass another brick bridge opposite a metal bridge: keep straight on through more tall poplars. The canal bends sharp left while the river curves away to the right. You pass Drungewick Winding Hole (a widened section for turning boats) and Slipway, followed by a removable heavy vehicle crossing, after which the canal passes over the Drungewick Aqueduct. Here, leave the canalside, up through a wooden gate to a lane. Turn right on Drungewick Lane.
- 2 You pass the gates to Drungewick Manor on your left. This was originally a 13th-century fortified moated manor house, much changed by the Onslows (after whom the pub is named) from the 1600s to Victorian times. The lane is lined with large oaks as you pass a small house. Just before the next house, turn right on a signed bridleway. You are about 600m from where you joined the lane. Go through a wooden gate on the right and along a path by a fence. After 80m follow a wide path which bears slightly left and soon narrows, leading you through a long strip of woodland. After nearly 500m, as you pass openings into fields, fork left at a fingerpost. Your bridleway joins a track coming from the right. In roughly another 150m, just before a footpath on the left, turn right on a narrow path through an old coppice. The footpath curves left downhill, then right, and runs beside a stream on you left in a woodland area which in late spring is carpeted with bluebells. The footpath goes over a 2-plank bridge with a handrail and meets a path coming from the right. Go through a wooden gate by a larger wooden gate and follow the path beside a fence with a pasture on your left.
- 3 The path bends left at a corner on a grassy path liberally speckled with flowers. At the end, go through a large metal gate and turn right on a concrete drive. After about 100m, go through a new metal kissing gate next to a new metal farm gate. Where the drive comes to a T-junction, turn right on a lane taking you to Brewhurst Mill and Farm. Your route is left before the mill but first it is a delightful treat to walk through the hamlet (which also leads back to the canal) and back again to see the old cottages and farmhouse. Returning to the mill, take the marked footpath alongside it. Re-opening the mill was also part of the Canal restoration project. It had existed since 1500. The large steel wheel you see outside was in fact the second wheel, added later. The main wheel was an internal overshot wheel (i.e. where the water runs over the top of the wheel). You pass some giant hogweed (don’t touch!) and cross a bridge over the Mill Pond going through a wooden gate. Stay on the right-hand side of the small meadow with the river visible over on your left, fringed with poplars. At the end, go up a bank to the canal path and turn left back to the start of the walk.

Getting there

By car: the Onslow Arms is just south of Loxwood on the B2133. If coming from the London area, one route is the A281 from Guildford and fork left at Alfold Crossways. Another route is via Dorking and the A29 / A281, forking left at Bucks Green onto the Loxwood Road.

By bus/train: route 64 from Horsham, for one. Check the timetables.

fancy more free walks? www.fancyfreewalks.org