

Iron Hill, Milland, Older Hill

Distance: 16 km=10 miles

easy-to-moderate walking

Region: West Sussex

Date written: 17-feb-2014

Author: Hautboy

Last update: 8-jun-2016

Refreshments: Milland, Liphook

Map: Explorer 133 (Petersfield) but the maps in this guide should be sufficient

Problems, changes? We depend on your feedback: feedback@fancyfreewalks.org

Public rights are restricted to printing, copying or distributing this document exactly as seen here, complete and without any cutting or editing. See Principles on main webpage.

Woodland, hills, green meadows, heath, views

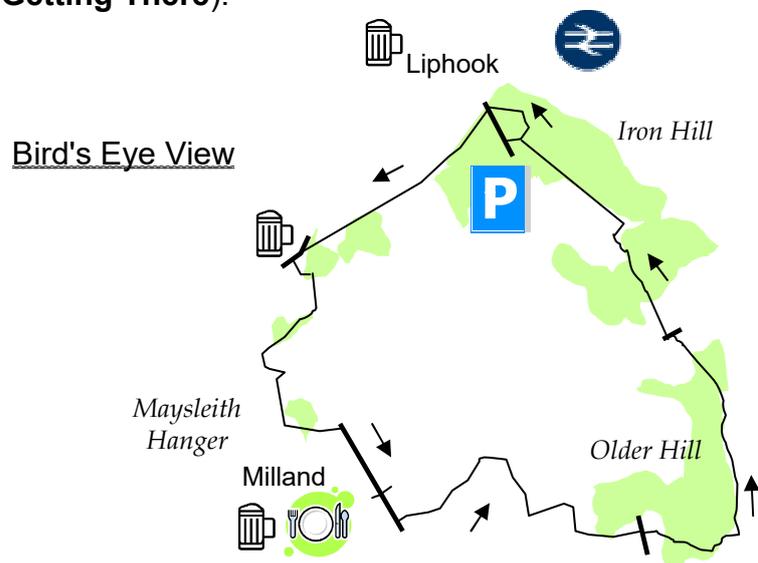

In Brief

This is a wonderful, rather energetic, walk in a hilly region on the Sussex-Hampshire border, combining the steep Maysleith Hanger and another long string of hills in this lesser-known part of Sussex.

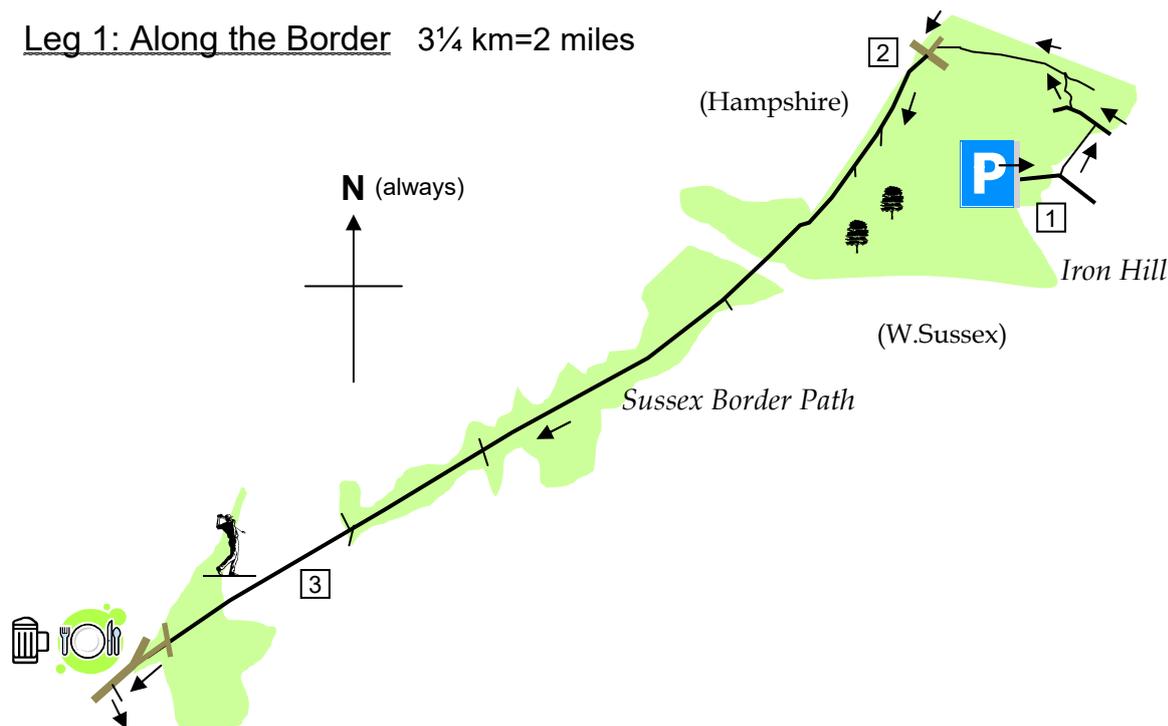

There were no nettles or brambles when this walk was done in February but in high summer you will find the paths more overgrown and the views more obscured by foliage. Because of the hilly terrain and the well-surfaced paths in the valley, this walk is mainly dry underfoot, although boots are recommended in the wetter seasons. Your dog can come with you since the pubs and the stiles are dog-friendly.

The walk begins at the Iron Hill car park, just outside Liphook, Hants (although this walk is entirely in West Sussex), grid ref SU848303, nearest postcode GU30 7LP. Milland, postcode GU30 7NA, is another good starting place if you want to end the walk at lunch time. For more details, see at the end of this text (→ Getting There).

The Walk

Leg 1: Along the Border 3¼ km=2 miles

- 1 From the back of the Iron Hill car park, take the main path through an open 1-bar barrier uphill. In 100m, at the top of the slope, leave the main path which curves away right, and instead fork left on a narrower path. (a) In 15m, ignore a minor path which forks away right. Your path curves left and comes down to a wide crossing path. Turn left on the crossing path and, in 60m, at a bend, turn right on a path into the pines. This path leads you downhill. Avoid side paths leading off right to stay on the main path. Your path zigzags left-right past the remains of a fence. At a fingerpost veer left by another wire fence, thus joining the Sussex Border Path (SBP). Follow this rather scruffy woodland path, with a fence on your right, for 200m or so, finally coming out to a tarmac lane. Turn left to a road junction.
- 2 Cross straight over the major road, with Hampshire and Liphook signs on your right, to a wide path opposite, thus continuing on the SBP. The SBP runs around the borders of both Sussexes. This path is also the start of the New Lipchis Way which runs from here to Chichester and part of the Serpent Trail, a wonderful snaking route from Haslemere to Petersfield. Your path joins a wide track coming from the left. Ignore two private left forks to North Lodge Farm soon afterwards, staying on the main path at all times. You pass a metal barrier on your left, and more fields and gates, some wrought iron and whelp-topped gateposts, indicating that you are passing the Wheatsheaf Inclosure [sic], an exclusive housing district.
- 3 On your left soon is the Forestry Commission's Hatch Firs and you approach the Liphook Golf Club's first tee. Ignore a bridleway forking left at a fingerpost and keep ahead at another as you pass through gorse and birch. More woodland takes you quickly to a road junction. Cross the road and follow the short tarmac to the main B2070 road and cross the road to the Black Fox Inn. If you started late, this is an excellent place for lunch, serving a good, if pricey, menu (remember, this is Liphook) washed down with Bass, the ubiquitous Doom Bar and the sublime Bowman's Swift One. The pub also boasts a skittle alley.

Leg 2: Over the Hanger 3¼ km=2 miles

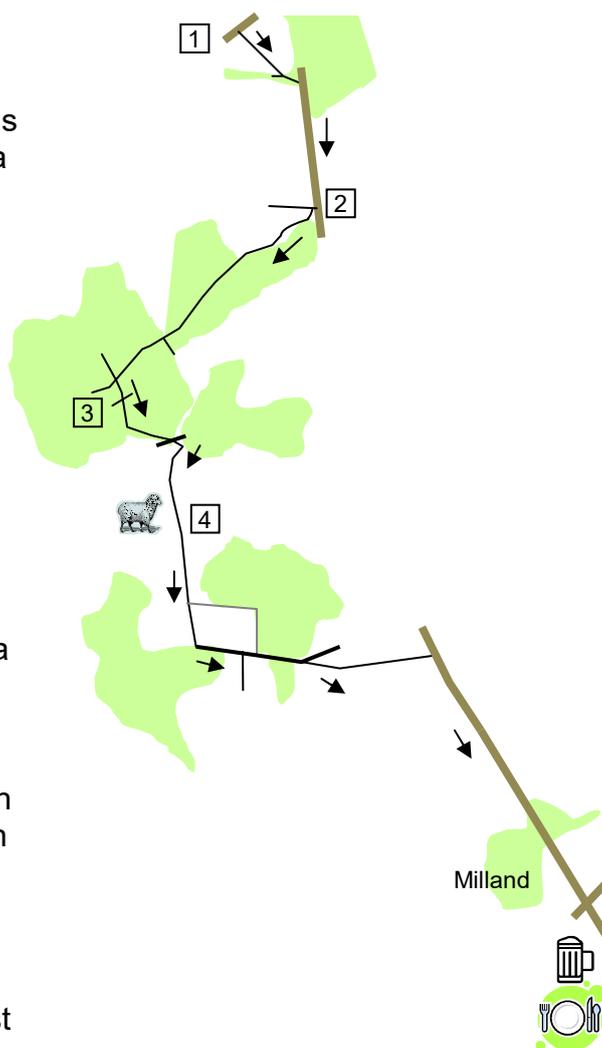

- 1 After possible refreshment, cross the main road again and take a signed narrow footpath immediately opposite the pub. The footpath runs between plantations and through hollies to join a path coming from the right and meet a road beside a stone cottage. Turn right on the road and ignore a bridleway on your left to pass between two ball-crested stone gate posts and reach the entrance to Milland Place.

Milland Place was originally Elizabethan. It was home to one of Charles II's mistresses (they say the feisty Louise, though that's just one of countless fanciful tales, along with smugglers, monks and goodness knows what else). It was rebuilt in Victorian Tyrolean Gothic style at the beginning of the 1900s after a fire.

- 2 Opposite the entrance, turn right on a track by a concealed fingerpost. Do not take the footpath straight ahead over a stile but turn immediately left, initially parallel to the road, on a path that runs along the field boundary. In 150m, the path goes by the remains of a stile and has woods on each side. 220m further on, the terrain opens out thanks to electricity wires and there is a spectacular view left across the steep Maysleith Hanger as you pass a marker post under wires. 150m further on, you come to a 4-way fingerpost at a crossing track. Turn left here. As a diversion, by turning right, you can visit the late-Victorian Milland Church of St Luke and the Tuxlith Chapel. This is also seen on the other walk in this series, "Durford Heath and Milland Mill". You need to retrace your steps afterwards.

- 3 Your path descends the hanger very steeply down a flight of stone steps with a handrail and you should exercise extreme care. At the bottom, cross over another path by a fingerpost. You now have great views ahead, where the foliage permits, as you go steeply downhill under beeches. As you come to a high bank, turn left as indicated. A few more steps take you alongside Maysleith house and farm buildings. Follow their driveway to a fingerposted junction and go straight over, avoiding the bridleway which forks left. In 30m, at a 3-way fingerpost, turn right beside a small cow pasture to reach a metal gate. Glancing back from here, the stone farm house and barn make an attractive picture.

- 4 Go through the gate into a sheep pasture with good views ahead. Keep to the left-hand side, go over a stile and continue down the left of a larger meadow, between a hedge and a wire fence on your right. Where the wide path bends left, leave it to follow a signpost through a small wooden gate and straight across the meadow. (Local people tend to ignore this gate by instead turning left, staying on the wide path, going right-left round the perimeter of the meadow.) At the other side, go through another small wooden gate and over a 2-plank bridge to a wide path. Turn left on the path, ignoring two fingerposts that direct you into the trees. (The marked footpaths do a pointless little loop, dating from the good old days when the field was divided up with hedges.) In 80m avoid a junction on the right. As the path approaches farm buildings, at the start of a large grassy meadow, go through a large gate on your right and follow the electricity posts across the length of the pasture to a stile at the far end leading to a road. Turn right on this Roman road, soon passing the first houses of Milland and, after 600m or so on the road, reaching the crossroads in the centre of Milland where you will find the Rising Sun inn and, just after that, the Milland Stores and Café who serve excellent sausage rolls and brownies.

Milland was a spread-out parish without a village centre until they built council houses here in 1948. An ancient Roman road runs north-south through the village and there is still evidence of a Roman posting station here. The whole area around the central crossroads was known as Milland Marsh (like a lot of other areas around here, including Trotton Marsh, Stedham Marsh etc.). And for good reason: the heavy local clay! The clay came in handy as raw material when Jane Hawkins built Milland Pottery (by hand) in 1947 (still going strong, though Jane herself is now getting on a bit (2014)) and also for what used to be Milland's "industrial" area, just west of the village, where for many years there was a thriving brickworks (hence "Brickyard Cottages", built from the local bricks). Milland's bricks were shipped by rail all over the country until brick-making finally ended in 1937.

The "Rising Sun" you see here today was built on the site of an older pub in the late 1930s because they thought that the London-Portsmouth road would be diverted through the valley, and so the pub was built in what you might call "roadhouse" style to attract the anticipated motorist trade. Luckily for Milland, the plan was fought off and the new road pushed well north of Liphook. Political surreal cartoonist Gerald Scarfe and his wife actress/novelist/lifestylist Jane Asher live in Milland and you may glimpse them at lunch time.

Leg 3: Valley Crossing 3½ km=2¼ miles

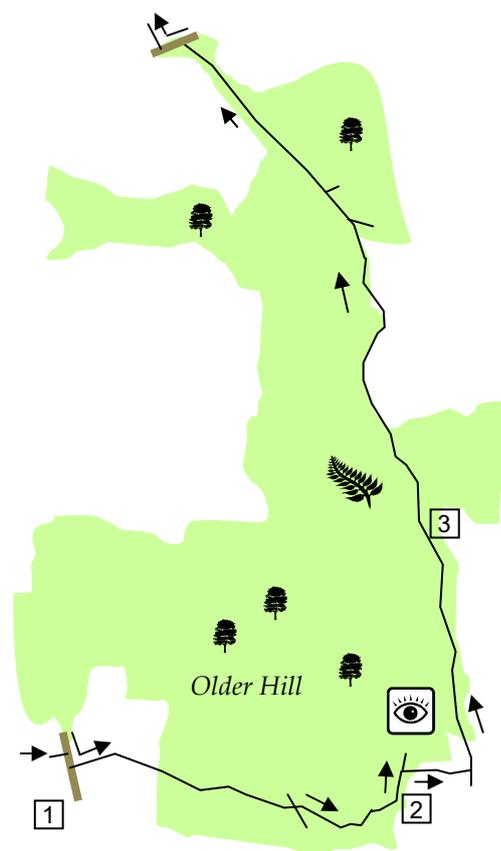

- 1 After a possible break for refreshment, continue along the Roman road, in the same direction. In 300m, at a fingerpost, go left over a stile into a horse pasture. Keep near the left-hand edge but veer away from it aiming for the right-hand side of a stone cottage ahead. As you go, Titty Hill and Older Hill loom up on your right. Go over two stiles, with a 2-plank bridge in between, and along a long thin meadow. A stone bridge takes you over the Hammer Stream. Go over a stile, straight across a narrow meadow, over a stile and bridge combination and across the centre of a field. After another stile, go along the left-hand side of a perfect green meadow. At the other side, go over a stile, or through a large metal gate, and onto a grassy path towards the farm ahead. The official footpath now goes immediately left through a modern swing-gate across the small meadow, diverging slightly from the path, ending at a new small wooden gate on the left of a small donkey pasture. However, at the time of writing, the gate was flooded, and it was a simple matter to continue on the grassy path and turn left in front of a wooden gate. Go through a second similar small wooden gate on the left of a barn and turn left on a driveway leading away from the farm.

- 2 In only 20m, at a fingerpost, turn right on a path between a wire fence and a sapling hedge, curving right. At a redundant stile, turn left on a semi-tarmac path. Immediately go over a stile on your right and follow a faint path that diverges a little from the path you were on, heading for the far right-hand corner to cross a stile. Here turn right on a tarmac lane, Lambourne Lane. You will be following this tranquil cul-de-sac lane for 500m. It crosses a stream and rises again and ends at a 3-way junction by a fingerpost. Turn left here on a wide track, marked as a footpath, running between meadows.
- 3 The track bends right and left through Slathurst Farm. It then bends right in front of a farm cottage. As you come out into a large field, your path turns left and runs along its left-hand side. Continue into the next field and a third field, always keeping to the left side. Exit finally beside a metal gate to a road, Linch Road. Turn right on the road, just outside the village of Redford (see several other walks in this series based on Woolbeding Common).

Leg 4: Older Hill 3 km=2 miles

- 1 In only 30m, go left over a stile into a large pasture. One walker skirted round a group of docile cows and their calves. Go up the right-hand side, rounding the first jutting corner, and head for the woods, entering them by means of a stile. At once you need to keep a look out for a series of fingerposts which very clearly direct you a fraction right, then straight uphill with pinewoods on your left and a coppice on your right. You reach a crossing path by a 3-way fingerpost: keep straight ahead on a rather narrow path, ignoring wider paths left and right. A marker post directs you on a winding ascending path. At the top of the path you meet another fingerpost atop a mossy bank. Turn left and immediately fork right on a fairly level path. You may need to keep alert for marker posts to reassure you that you are on the official footpath: there is always another one in your line of sight. You quickly come to a 2-plank bridge with a rail. Cross it and immediately turn left to emerge on the grassy hillside of Older Hill next to a cottage on your right.

- 2 Turn left on a wide descending path. In 100m turn right, as indicated by a marker post, on a grassy path between bracken, passing under power lines. At a grassy clearing with two houses visible up on your right, keep straight on across the centre to go over a stile into the woods. In 20m, at a marker post, your path turns abruptly left, running gently downhill. At a marker post, another footpath joins from the right. Your path goes down over a 2-plank bridge with rail, under wires, and continues through a forest of chestnut and birch saplings before ascending a sandy bank. Some mud in the next short section can be avoided by going through trees on your left. You are now on a fairly straight narrow path through more woods, amongst saplings, then under mature oak trees.

- 3 Your path widens to reveal a biologically rich area, with ferns and mosses in abundance. Soon an open meadow appears on your right and your path soon comes out into the meadow and runs along the left-hand side of it. [2014: after the February gales there are many fallen trees across your route, easily avoided since you are in an open meadow.] Keep going for nearly ½ km with woods close by on your left. Finally your path re-enters woodland. You meet a 3-way fingerpost: keep straight on, avoiding the right turn and joining the New Lipchis Way. The path runs beside a bank on your left with hollies and firs in profusion. A 2-plank bridge leads you alongside a transformer station, finally coming out to a road in a small hamlet called Elmers Marsh. Turn left on the road.

Leg 5: Iron Hill 2¾ km=1¾ miles

- 1 In just 40m, turn right at a signpost on a wide track marked as a bridleway, passing a house and its outbuildings. Your path enters trees with a field on your right and you have in prospect a fairly long climb to the top of Iron Hill, although the gradient is fairly kind. As the field on your right ends, you come to a 3-way fingerpost. Keep straight ahead here on the bridleway, avoiding the footpath on your right. (The other branch is explored in the walk “Marley Common”.) You are in a deeply sunken path surrounded by steep sides as your path runs by a mature coppice with a line of chestnuts and the occasional oak. It runs beside steep sides again. [2014: there is a fallen tree that you can duck under – after removing your backpack!] Finally, and with some relief, you reach the top, by farmland with fields and sheds in evidence.
- 2 At a marker post, your path turns right. You meet a track at a bend by another fingerpost. Turn left here, soon going under power lines. In 400m or so, a wider sandy path comes in from a junction on your right. If you hear an occasional “hoot!”, this comes from the Hollycombe Steam Collection, an adventure museum with a locomotive, yacht and fairground, all powered by steam. Your path passes a 1-bar barrier where a little wooden house marks the entrance to a timber yard. Stay on this nice easy path, gently descending until it reaches a junction at a point which you will be familiar from your outward journey. (If you did not start at the Iron Hill car park, turn right here on a narrower path and skip to point (a) in the first section.) Keep left on the main path leading down to the car park where the walk began.

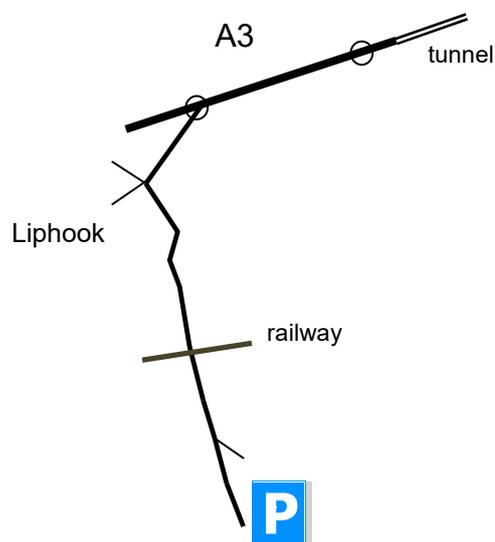

For final refreshments, the “Royal Anchor” in the centre of Liphook is now a kind of family chain diner, good for burgers etc. The posher “Links Tavern” is just outside the village on the Portsmouth Road (direction “Rake”). The iconic “Deers Hut” is only 1 mile west along the Longmoor Road (direction “Greatham”).

Thanks to Val Porter of Milland News for the historical information throughout this guide.

Getting there

By car: Take the A3 and turn off through Liphook. (From London, this is the second exit after the Hindhead tunnel.) At a tortuous series of mini-roundabouts and larger ones, keep following signs for Liphook Station and/or the Hollycombe Steam Collection (with a brown tourist sign showing a merry-go-round). After you go over the railway bridge, the Iron Hill car park is 1 km=2/3 mile on your left.

By bus/train: Liphook station is only about 800m from the walk. Turn right out of the station and right again over the railway bridge on the Midhurst Road. There is a pavement or footway all the way. Begin the walk at the 3-way junction just after the Welcome to West Sussex sign, starting from section 2.

fancy more free walks? www.fancyfreewalks.org