Beach, sea, river, marina, village

In Brief

This walk is the first on this site to include a lovely long walk along a beach! Nowadays you won't find many in W.Sussex that are still wild and free.

One of them is Climping Beach, near Littlehampton. Just one factor that might influence your choice of date: don't go during a high tide. This is because the shingle on the beach is too uncomfortable to walk on but at low or medium tide there is a wide mixed sand-and-pebble strip all the way which is perfectly walkable. To check before you go, try the tide times website at: www.tidetimes.org.uk and click on "Worthing". Climping (or Clymping) is an ancient parish with a church, a (disused) windmill and sand dunes. The beach is popular but not as crowded as the resort towns and there is a large overflow car park.

This being the seaside, shorts are fine, as is practically any sensible footwear. It's also fine for your dog.

The walk begins at the Climping Beach car park, near Littlehampton, West Sussex, postcode BN17 5RN. This car park is sometimes flooded (check the tides!). There is a reasonable hourly charge (£1 as 2015). There is a small café here, open seasonally. Another good start is the West Beach car park, postcode BN17 5DL, if this is more favourable for the tide. You can come by rail via Littlehampton. For more details, see at the end of this text (→ Getting There).

See map overleaf. Facing the sea, turn left along the beach. If you go down the shingle you will find a fairly sandy strip and, although there are pebbles here and there, it is quite comfortable to walk on. At low tide, you may find even more sand. If you are walking at high tide, you can make use of a tarmac drive and continue over the dunes. Your first destination is a long breakwater in the distance. It guards the outflow of the River Arun. After a walk of 2 km, turn left back up the beach alongside a sea barrier, looking across the river to Littlehampton and its funfair.

- 2 Go through a pay-and-display car park (alternate start) and continue near the river. You can either take a concrete lane or go down a strip of sand even closer to the river. If you choose the sandy route, you need to go left-right round a creek by the marina and possibly duck under some boarding ramps, after which you must exit left back to the concrete lane, through the Littlehampton Yacht Club and ferry entrance. Continue along the lane and, where it bears left to the golf club car park, leave the lane by forking right on a narrow tarmac footpath. There are small sand dunes here and, as a temporary diversion, on your right a footbridge takes you to an islet with a seat, a possible picnic spot. Continue following the high path, passing a creek with several interesting old wrecks, going beside the white Dormy Cottage. You come out to a road. Keep straight ahead along the road, ignoring a footpath on your left. On your right soon is Rita's Café, a pleasant outlet with generous sandwiches. At a T-junction, turn right. Straight ahead, but not on your route, is a swing bridge and, on the other side of the Arun you will find two pubs, the Steam Packet and the Arun View, both well regarded for food. This route also leads to Littlehampton Railway Station \(by turning right\), in case you began the walk there.

Believe it or not, the River Arun didn't always reach the sea here. Until the late 1400s it flowed into the River Adur 10 miles to the east. That route got silted up and the river found its own way to form the present estuary during the 1500s.

- 3 Turn immediately left on a wide tarmac drive for the Littlehampton Marina. In 50m, turn right as indicated, continue straight across the gravel to the riverside and turn left on a grassy path. After several impeccable mobile homes, you pass the Marina and, at a fingerpost, your path veers left across the concrete slipway. It and then veers right on a tarmac drive, passing the Boat House Café which is noted for its fresh fish but also serves good coffee. Keep right by some chalets and fork left, as directed by a signpost, through a gravel parking area and through a modern kissing-gate onto a woodland path. The path quickly winds its way out of the wood close to a road bridge. Continue under the road bridge on a wide path, bypassing any standing water. (The author forked right up a bank onto a higher path which re-joins the wide path; but recent reports found it impassable.) Very shortly, before a solid metal fence, turn left on a path (very overgrown in high summer), up a step, over a wooden bridge into a field.

- 4 Follow the nice clear straight path across the barley field for nearly 600m until you reach a hedge just in front of a Chalet village. Turn right and then left at the corner. [2022: the path was nice and clear; but in case it has been planted over, as in 2017, you should cross the field aiming for a gap in the far hedge, 600m distant, some 20m to the right of a caravan park; 2021: the field had been ploughed up – if this persists, please report this to W.Sussex C.C.!]

- 5 Just after a thatched cottage, turn right on a byway, passing St Mary's Clymping Primary School. Ignoring the footpath ahead, turn left opposite the school on a wide track between fields. After 300m, you reach a 4-way signposted junction. If you are not visiting the old village, there is a short cut here: simply keep straight ahead on the track and turn right at the beach, or on a tarmac track, back to the start. Turn right on a nice clear path across the wheat field, continuing on a drive past thatched cottages to a lane. Turn left, passing the one-time Black Horse Inn, now sadly closed. Continue on the lane, passing some old flint houses of the village and some woodland, arriving back at the beach where the walk began.

Getting there

By car: arriving at the big Arundel roundabout (via the A29/A284 or the A27), take the minor turning for Ford, Clymping. Go 3 miles through Ford, crossing a railway, to a major crossing of the A259 with a roundabout. Turn right on the A259 and, in nearly ½ mile, turn left as for Clymping Beach. Park at the end of the lane in the car park. There is a modest charge by ticket, calculated from arrival time. A possible alternative free parking site is Crookthorn Lane, postcode BN17 5QU, with some competition from the school run.

An alternative route is via the A24 and Worthing. Follow signs through Littlehampton and, from the A259, look for Clymping Beach as above.

By train: begin the walk at Littlehampton Railway Station. Turn right out of the station and, in 200m, turn left between two pubs and cross the River Arun via a long pedestrian bridge. Start the walk at section [3], but turn immediately right instead of left.
